Roosevelt Studies War Plane Sale Effect on U.S.

House Committee Begins Inquiry Into Release Of Latest Model

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday took a hand in the brewing storm over selling the latest American war planes to Europe's belligerents as a Congressional inquiry began.

The Chief Executive called Secretaries Morgenthau, Woodring and Edison and other defense chiefs to the White House for a conference on the war orders and their effect on Army and Navy plane deliveries. At the same time, a House military aviation subcommittee met and summoned Woodring before it next week.

Administration officials, while stressing that the interests of national defense are being amply protected, revealed that two more new 400-mile an hour war plane types with which the Army and Navy are not yet equipped have been released for foreign export.

The release for use abroad of the P-40 Curtiss pursuit plane, which the Army does not yet have, prompted the Congressional inquiry.

Edison Explains Program

Assistant Secretary of War Johnson said a "modified version" of the Lockheed P-38 pursuit plane has been released by the Army and Navy Aeronautical Board for foreign sale. He emphasized that its armament and other vital features had been withheld. The pilot model of the Lockheed set a transcontinental speed record last year.

Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, disclosed that the new Grumman fighter, of which the Navy has only one, has been made available for export.

Secretary Edison said the Navy had made some adjustments of its plane contracts to "accommodate" foreign buyers. He explained that the Navy's chief concern is to have all the planes on an order delivered when needed for the new aircraft carriers rather than that manufacturers meet monthly delivery schedules.

Both Edison and Johnson denied that foreign plane purchasers have raised the price of Army and Navy orders. The Navy Secretary declared the flood of war orders should ultimately lower prices by forcing "a change from tailor-made craft to mass production methods."

Increase in Army Costs

Col. Johnson said there had been an increase in the cost of Army planes but blamed it on changes made in the craft and uncertainty as to labor and material costs rather than the British-French purchases.

Representative Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, announced following a closed meeting of the House Military Aviation subcommittee that Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and other Army officials will be called with Woodring.

At the same time, Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, introduced a resolution calling for an investigation by the Senate Military Affairs Committee to determine whether foreign purcheses "have delayed or threaten in the future to delay" delivery of planes and other arms to American forces.

Reports have been rife that the Franco-British purchasing mission here delayed placing a $1,000,000,000 order for 8,000 warplanes because they want to divert the latest planes

Goss Quits, Attacks Farm Credit Bill

Jones' Measure Would Substitute 1-Man Rule, He Says

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Controversy over Federal farm loan policy mounted last night as President Roosevelt made public the resignation of Albert S. Goss, Land Bank commissioner of the Farm Credit Administration.

Simultaneously with the White House announcement Goss condemned farm credit legislation under which "the Government pays the loss whenever the borrower wants to quit paying."

The retiring commissioner asserted the bill introduced by Representative Jones (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, "would destroy the cooperative credit system which has operated successfully for 23 years and substitute for it a highly centralized bureaucratic lending agency under one-man control."

Goss said the Jones measure is "loaded with political bait." He expressed hope that "the foundations of a sound credit system have been so firmly laid that they will withstand the efforts being made in this election year to use the system for political purposes."

He called the bill a "secret rush act," charging that it was drafted without consultation with the land banks or farm loan associations.

Wagner Act Changes Likely This Session

House Committee Starts on Revision Administration Favors

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Administration-approved changes in the Wagner Labor Act appeared possible at this session of Congress yesterday when the House Labor Committee set the stage for drafting the necessary legislation.

Meanwhile, the drastic revisions proposed by the Smith committee investigating the National Labor Relations Board were attacked by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, author of the Labor Act, and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The House Labor Committee, by a vote of 17 to 1, agreed to end hearings, started May 4 on bills to revise the Wagner Act, and to meet behind closed doors next Tuesday to consider legislation. Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, was the only member voting in opposition.

The committee's action followed a visit by Representative Norton, of New Jersey, chairman, to the White House Tuesday, during which she discussed at length with the President the question of Wagner Act changes.

The President was described in authoritative Congressional quar-

D. C. Contractors Stress Opposition To Bid Pooling

Organized general building contractors of Washington pointed out yesterday that they are and have been aggressively opposed to bid pooling practices.

The District Court Tuesday enjoined the Mason Contractors Association, 5 local companies and 16 contracting and union officials from operating an alleged "bid depository."

Several members of the Master Builders Association felt that "D. C. Builders" in a headline yesterday in The Post, implied that general construction contractors were involved, whereas such is not the case.

Tax Proposed On All Incomes Earned in D. C.

Bates' Plan Evades Domicile Controversy; Hearing Starts Today

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

A solution to the District income tax muddle was suggested yesterday by Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, as the House subcommittee on fiscal relations prepared to tackle the revenue problem today.

Bates, a member of the subcommittee, said he would propose that the income tax law be amended to apply to the income of nonresidents earned in the National Capital.

Such a provision, he said, would evade the domicile controversy and yet tax the salaries of Government employes and others who earn their livelihood in the District, but retain a legal residence elsewhere.

Seal Issues Warning

It would dodge triple taxation in most instances, he said, in that many States have reciprocal clauses which would allow deductions for taxes paid to the District provided the District extended a similar courtesy to the States.

Chairman William H. King of the Senate District Committee disclosed that he recently had proposed a similiar solution in telephone conversations with Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal. King, who made his suggestion while he was ill at home, said he had proposed that the tax apply to income earned in the District but that the District give credit for income taxes paid to States of domicile.

Meanwhile, Corporation Counsel Seal yesterday issued a formal warning that the District will continue to enforce the income tax act and that residents will face penalty charges for failure to file returns before April 15.

Bates Expects Objections

Persons who consider themselves domiciled elsewhere, Seal said, should file the return and pay the tax, submitting at the same time a claim for a refund.

Bates took issue with the view of another Massachusetts citizens, James J. Sweeney, Justice Department attorney, that Government employes who have legal domiciles

Thomas Circle Underpass Dedicated by D. C. Leaders

By Howard F. Wentworth

While the first car won't pass through it until 10 o'clock this morning, Washington's new $547,000 tunnel under Thomas Circle was dedicated yesterday afternoon with bunting, speeches and champagne.

Members of the Central Business Men's Association gathered at the underpass to officiate at the christening which marked the completion of a project for which they had long and steadfastly worked.

Two men who labored many months to perfect the new propect —Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director, and L. D. Smoot, his chief engineer—were on hand to take in the ceremonies. Present also were many other District officials.

Before the civic leaders, an assembly of citizens and the WJSV radio audience, Hugh V. Keiser, past president of the business men's group, explained that he and his associates had long felt that Thomas Circle should be underpassed, and he told the story that led to their convincing local authorities that such a project should be undertaken.

He said the new underpass and surface light decorations constituted the "greatest civic and scenic improvement Washington has ever known," and added the project marked a "milestone in the history of the Central Business Men's Association."

In addition to Keiser, the gathering heard Frederick Levy, president of the Central Business Men's Association, and these past presidents: Arthur Clarendon Smith, Theodore

Rome Announces Plan for Germany To Supply Most Of Her Coal by Rail

By Richard G. Massock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, March 13.—Russia was authoritatively reported tonight to be following up her successful conclusion of her war with Finland by initiating trade negotiations with Italy.

The new negotiations were reported impending after a day in which Germany agreed to supply Italy with most of her coal needs by rail to circumvent the British blockade, and in which the Fascist Chamber approved army and navy budgets totaling $379,000,000.

Authoritative sources say a Russian trade commission, which has headquarters at Milan, may come to Rome shortly to start negotiations for a new treaty. The head of the commission was reported already to have left for Moscow for final instructions.

Balkan Peace Move

There was speculation at once that a definite move might be under way for improvement of Italian-Russian relations such as German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop was reported to have urged in his conferences here with Premier Mussolini early this week.

(Another German - sponsored peace gesture toward southeast Europe was reported from Bucharest, where diplomatic circles asserted plans for a Rumanian-Russin nonaggression pact were under discussion. A Rumanian military delegation to Berlin is said to be carrying on the negotiations.)

[However, an indication that Italy has not abandoned her suspicious view of the U. S. S. R.'s intentions was seen in a United Press report that Turkey had received an Italian proposal of direct collaboration in event of Russian aggression in the Balkans.

Three Army Corps Created

[Turkey's government was said to have been "somewhat impressed" but wary because of reluctance to allow Italian initiative to become the deciding factor in Turkish policy in the Balkans. Turkey has mutual assistance pacts with both France and Britain.—Editor's note.]

The German agreement dims the prospect of Italy obtaining coal from the United States because of high shipping costs, informed Italian quarters said.

Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, undersecretary of war, introducing the defense budget, revealed that Italy has 1,000,000 men under arms and fortifications protecting the length of her land frontiers, including those facing Germany.

Soddu said Italy's military power had been increased since September

Helsinki Will Seek Pact With Sweden, Norway for Defense, Tanner Declares

By Lynn Heinzerling,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, March 13.—Finland, mourning its peace with the grief of the vanquished, was given hope tonight of saving its independence and protecting its shorn borders through the prospect of a defensive pact with Sweden and Norway and was exhorted by its government to rise from its "state of mutilation" through unity.

Foreign Minister Tanner, after a national broadcast to the people, told the foreign press that conversations looking to a defensive alliance with the two large Scandinavian states, already arranged, but halted by the war, would be started soon. The initiative in this, he said, came from Finland.

Earlier, with the mourning etched black against a background of softly falling snow, the Finns heard Tanner declare that Finland's defense against Russia had foundered on the "unwillingness or inability" of Sweden and Norway (and behind them the Western Allies), to send troops or allow troops to cross their soil.

"We Are Too Small"

"All that can be said against us," he added, sadly, "is that as a nation we are too small."

Field Marshal Mannerheim, in his final order of the day, also spoke bitterly of the West's failure to send more help. Foreign volunteers, he said, totaled only 2,000. He put Russian losses at 200,000 men, Finland's at 16,000.

The defensive alliance, if it is effected, would be intended to protect the independence and boundaries of Sweden, Norway and Finland from aggression—mainly, it is presumed, Russian or German.

Tanner, to the newspapermen, denied that the Western powers had pressed Finland to continue the war, gave them thanks for "large quantities" of war material, "although they had no obligation to Finland,' and expressed gratitude to the United States for monetary aid and for the volunteers who have come from America.

Army Not Consulted

Asked if he thought today's peace was an interlude, he replied, "I can't answer."

He disclosed, however, that this "unhappy peace" was made without consultation with the army command.

"Peace," he explained, "is a political question. We did not ask the army headquarters about it. The only thing we asked was the position on the front."

Finnish Leader Says:

'Peace Has Thus Returned —But What a Peace!'

By the Associated Press

Helsinki (Thursday), March 14. Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, in a final order of the day, declared bitterly early today that Finland has "paid to the very last penny any debt we may have owed to the west."

Only two battalions of foreign volunteers—about 2,000 men — arrived in Finland in time to join the fight, the tired, 72-year-old commander in chief of the armies said.

The aged leader, who estimated that 200,000 Russians and 15,000 Finns were slain in the 105-day war ended yesterday, said however: "We are proudly conscious of the historic duty which we will continue to fulfill: Defense of that western civilization which has been our heritage for centuries . . ."

(Baron Mannerheim apparently meant that Finland had held the fort for the western democracies for three and a half months despite the fact that no large-scale military help came from the west. Although he was not specific, it is also to be recalled that Finland, alone of America's Helsinki, March 13.—Following is a partial text of Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner's broadcast on the Finnish-Russian peace today:

Finland was drawn into war through no fault of her own. Territorial demands were presented to her and she prepared to satisfy these demands to a reasonable extent. This notwithstanding, the negotiations broke down.

Finland trusted, however, in agreements concluded with her neighbor and in the desire for peace repeatedly proclaimed by this neighbor and did not believe war would break out.

Nevertheless war did break out and the country was compelled to defend itself.

Right from the beginning it was evident the struggle would be an unequal one.

The battle has been stern. Defending ourselves against a superior enemy, our army has been compelled to exert itself to the utmost.

They have behaved—I will not say as heroes, for that would be

Tokyo Paper Says U. S. Sought Peace In Finland to Free Soviet in Orient

By the Associated Press

Shanghai (Thursday), March 14.—Resumption of fighting between Russian and Japanese troops on the Nomonhan front on he border of Outer Mongolia was reported here today in unconfirmed advices from Manchukuo.

Fighting in that area was ended last September by an armistice

The reports said the Soviets had advanced 5 miles and were moving troops and equipment eastward on the trans-Siberian railway.

Chinese returning from Hailar said rail traffic there consisted mostly of military movement toward Nomonhan, and similar information came from Dairen.

Observers linked the reports of increased Soviet pressure on Manchukuo with cessation of Russian-Finnish hostilities.

The Russians were reported to be increasingly adamant concerning negotiations of the border demarcation commission begun after the end of last summer's fighting but which ended when the Soviet delegates walked out.

History of Truce

Russia and Japan last September 15 concluded a truce which ended four months and four days of bloody fighting on the border of the Japanese puppet state of Manchukuo and the Soviet-backed government of Outer Mongolia.

The war was memorable for the extravagant claims of aerial victories from both sides, was no less real for the obviously exaggerated war communiques.

The Japanese at first claimed that only the troops of Henry Pu Yi, puppet emperor of Manchukuo were doing the fighting on their side, but later regular Japanese troops, including artillery and tank units, began to appear at the front, on the desolate stretches of the Khalka River valley.

The Russians likewise asserted their satellite's troops were defending their frontiers, but American correspondents who reached the front from Tokyo reported interviewing Russian prisoners.

The truce provided for establishment of a boundary commission, which met sporadically for several months, but more recently was reported to have broken off negotiations.

War in Year Before

The previous summer, Japan and Russia fought a "vest-pocket" war, on the other side of Manchukuo, near the junction of the Siberian, Manchukuoan and Koran frontiers, south of Vladivostok, Russia's great military and naval center on the Pacific.

That "war" ended as abruptly as it had begun, with each side claiming victory, and a draw the best neutral judges could give.

Another flaw in Japanese-Russian relations is the fact the Soviet Russia has been giving the Chunking government of Chiang-Kai-shek much assistance in the way of materials, sent overland through western China. Japan's war on China has been an "anti-Communist" crusade, according to frequent Japanese protestations.

Roosevelt Deplores Conquest, Praises Finns for Bravery

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Marked displeasure with the outcome of the Russian warfare against Finland was evidenced by President Roosevelt yesterday when he said in a public statement:

"The ending of this war does not yet clarify the inherent right of small nations to the maintenance of their integrity against attack by superior force."

Whether use of the word "yet" indicated any hope was held for future developments that would assure such rights was not made clear.

Mr. Roosevelt, at the same time, protested against any further encroachments on the Finns' territory and peace.

The statement recalled that the President last December 1 had deplored the spread of the "policy of force" and "wanton disregard for law." At that time, also, he denounced Russian bombing of Finnish territory and said peace-loving nations unanimously condemned resort to military force in settling international differences.

Adding yesterday to the previous statement, Mr. Roosevelt praised the Finns for their "unexcelled valor" in the face of tremendous odds, and said they "have won the right to live in everlasting peace and independence in the land they have so bravely defended."

The exposition of the Chief Executive's views was issued late in the day after reporters had sought for hours some official expression of American reaction to the severe terms imposed on Finland by the Soviets.

It came while anger toward the Soviets was being manifested on Capital Hill in a new suggestion for severance of diplomatic relations with Moscow, and impatient Administration insistence that this country had had no part in arranging the peace negotiations.

The text of the statement issued by the White House follows:

In a statement given to the press on December 1, 1939, the President said, "it is tragic to see the policy of force spreading and to realize that wanton disregard for law is still on the march."

"At the same time, the President declared that all peace-loving peoples still hoped for relations throughout the world on the basis of law and order, and unanimously condemned resort to military force as the arbiter of international differences.

"The President also asserted that news of the Soviet naval and military bombings within Finnish territory had come as a profound shock; that to the great misfor-

Lloyd George Joins In Attack for Failure To Dispatch Troops

London, March 13.—Prime Minister Chamberlain, rising in the House of Commons under the eyes of the Soviet ambassador, Ivan M. Maisky, eulogized the epic gallantry of the Finns today and started a sharp and angry debate in which Russia was bitterly condemned and Britain's Finnish policy was repeatedly criticized.

Though it was expected he would give a detailed explanation of the events preceding today's armistice, Chamberlain surprised and appeared to displease the House by reading a bare two-minute statement in which he reminded the members of the material help sent to Finland, recalled the Allied offer to dispatch an expeditionary force and emphasized that it had always been recognized that Finland must be left to decide whether to call for that aid.

In their decision not to call for help, the Prime Minister said, the Finns were assured that the British people were united in their sympathy and in their admiration for Finnish courage.

In conclusion, he said, "this epic story will ever be recounted in the chronicles of their own history and will remain alive, in the memory

Russians Took Viipuri Before Armistice

Soviet Hails Accord As Smashing Blow At Allied Imperialism

By Witt Hancock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), March 14.—The Russian military command early today announced its troops, in a two-hour assault just before yesterday's armistice, had captured the City of Viipuri, which goes to Russia anyway by the peace treaty with Finland.

While the Soviet people and press hailed the peace treaty as a great triumph for Josef Stalin's "policy of peace" and a shattering blow to British and French "imperialist" plans to spread the war over all of Europe, the Leningrad military command issued this communique:

"Thirteenth March: At 7 a. m. after two hours of storming, the Soviet troops occupied the town of Viipuri. On other sectors of the front there was nothing important up to 12 noon. At 12 noon, Leningrad time, hostilities ceased on all sectors of the front in conformity with the peace treaty."

The Russians laid siege to Viipuri immediately after the fall of the Koivisto forts February 24.

The Kremlin made no effort to conceal its satisfaction that the dictated peace with Finland was the

British Call Welles 'Meddler;' 'Uncle Shylock' Feeling Revived

By Frazier Hunt

London (Thursday), March 14.—Undersecretary of State Welles starts back to America today without seeing the slightest glimmer of hope for an early peace in Europe.

Instead he will carry back to President Roosevelt a grim picture of the belligerents' stubborn determination to continue the present deadlock until one side or the other gives up in exhaustion.

In the last 24 hours, the London reaction to Welles' visit has undergone an almost dramatic change. In none-too-polite terms he is called a meddler. The London Daily Mirror for example says of his visit:

"We are struggling for our lives. We do not like to be impeded even by charming people in that task."

The powerful Daily Mail on its front page frankly links Welles' mission to President Roosevelt's own political future in the light of the third-term controversy.

During his last day in London, Welles, accompanied by Ambassador Kennedy, conferred at some length with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

But the high hope expressed a fortnight ago has disappeared and has been replaced by frank skepticism. In the high official circles where Welles was entertained he has naturally found only the most guarded criticism, but if he were able to mix with ordinary people he would find a growing anti-American sentiment here.

Personally, I have been shocked by the revival of the same kind of

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

OVAL ROOM

Romantic people like to think of life in the President's oval office as one endless orgy of history-in-the-making. They picture Mr. Roosevelt or other occupants as constantly engaged in vetoing bills, signing treaties, ordering half a dozen battleships, launching peace feelers, conferring momentously, or pondering on third terms.

Harlan Miller

This is a slightly lurid and unreal picture. Actually there are long quarter hours and hours of comparative tedium, of trivial but unavoidable routine, and even of light-hearted frivolity after what might otherwise be a murderously crushing nervous strain.

There are even whole days when nothing very terrific happens.

* * * *

One moment Mr. Roosevelt may be listening to a polite but very thinly veiled and dogged ultimatum from his bad boys on the Hill.

The next he may be examining with the air of a connoisseur a donkey made entirely of Iowa corncobs or Oregon clamshells from a zealous admirer.

* * * *

An august visitor has just been ushered out, and here comes Gen. Pa Watson with a curious letter culled from the mailbags downstairs. Ordinarily the President wouldn't see it, at all. But perhaps it contains a pungent phrase, a raucous anecdote or a plaintive dilemma; a thunderous denunciation or a naive scheme for instantly restoring Nation-wide happiness.

For a moment the Oval Office rings with laughter.

"—the President inspects a curio"

Mr. Roosevelt has a solid appetite for the heavy meaty dishes of statecraft. But he takes an epicure's pleasure, too, in the small trifles of the Oval Office menu that are an unavoidable part of running his branch of the Government.

* * * *

Occasionally he sinks his teeth into an unknown function of an obscure bureau or commission—some report he has fished out of the big basket on his desk. And often he delights to explain it at some length to half-bewildered newsmen, most of whom have never heard of it.

* * * *

Some of his family life, some of his personal life overflows from the residential portion of the White House to the Oval Office.

There, like other busy executives, he pauses occasionally to greet old friends, to discuss the foibles and vagaries of his children, to sign a few personal checks, to reminisce a little, to indulge in a bit of horseplay.

* * * *

Many of his callers are neither official nor political. Occasionally the White House doctor drops in for a look at his throat, or one of his staff who has run an errand or two for him. He examines some purchases, or take care of some correspondence of which the public never hears.

"—new hat; no trifling occasion"

About half of his office day is spent in "personal contacts" with callers, the other half at paper work. And the paper work includes many a chore which never makes Page One, or even two paragraphs on Page 5.

* * * *

Where is such and such a report? Why hasn't so-and-so got this data finished? And why does Secretary X think he has to bother me about this little nuisance? Sometimes papers even get lost.

* * * *

Even a President has to try on a new Homberg hat, select some neckties, choose some fabrics for a new suit or two, select some shirts, a new suit or two, select some shirts—maybe even display a new pair of red, white and blue suspenders.

And the advent of a new Homberg hat is no small occasion; it may even overshadow, in some respects, a visit by the Archduke Otto.

Will this new hat bring sarcastic allusions to Anthony Eden and our British policy? And is the hat becoming?

* * * *

So there are sunny moments, quiet moments, drowsy moments, when the air in the Oval Office is no more dynamic and no more filled with bolts of lightning than the office of a college president.

Occasionally a document is dull, and the President's eyes wander out across the rolling green lawn outside the tall windows . . .

But oftener the atmosphere is one of conflict, of shock and triumph and gleeful retort, when you can almost hear the thwack of the 8-ounce gloves and the grunts of the adversaries.

N. H. Primary Puts Roosevelt In Campaign

No Statement Expected Until Returns Are in From Voting States

By Robert C. Albright

Election with the President's silent consent of New Hampshire's 8-man third-term delegation yesterday placed Mr. Roosevelt conclusively in the running for control of the Democratic convention.

Democrats on both sides of the third-term issue were in agreement on this interpretation and further concluded there is small probability of any White House statement of intentions until all State primary returns are in.

New Hampshire's virtually unchallenged Roosevelt victory will be followed in April and May by more spirited third-term contests in Middle and Far Western State primaries. Tuesday's effortless triumph provided a draft movement impetus that the President is not expected to slow before primary trials all are run.

As the Nation's first primaries assured an initial bloc of delegates favorable to the President's renomination, without a finger raised by Mr. Roosevelt for or against, some observers were convinced the President will not publicly state his plans until a matter of weeks or days before the convention.

Quoted as Wanting to Retire

Privately the President has told several trusted members of his party that he wants to retire, that he inclines toward Secretary of State Hull as his successor. And at least one confidant has been advised that Mr. Roosevelt would like in a non-Presidential capacity to represent this country in any world peace settlement that might follow his Administration.

But the leaders in the draft movement took the view that the President has never completely closed the door to the possibility of his running if the international situation continues in flux. Spurned by Tuesday's initial victory, the Roosevelt draft group of inner guard New Dealers continued activities in a majority of the 15 Presidential primary States, determined to send to the convention a controlling bloc of delegates that will either "draft" the President or name a man of his choosing.

While third-term advocates prepared for a more closely matched test with Vice President Garner in Wisconsin primaries three weeks from Tuesday, Republican leaders pointed significantly to the New Hampshire Republican vote, more than doubling that cast in the State's Democratic primary.

National and Congressional Republican campaign committee spokesmen, appetites whetted by G. O. P. Congressional victories in Ohio and Iowa, already are counting New Hampshire in the Republican column in November, regardless of what candidates are nominated.

G. O. P. House Forecast

Pointing for the next mid-western Congressional test—Nebraska's April 9 special election to fill the seat of the late Representative Heinke (Republican)—House Minority Leader Martin forecast it would bear out the trend toward a Republican-organized House in 1941.

While New Hampshire's Republicans elected an uninstructed slate of delegates to the G. O. P. National convention, it was a "favorite son" vote for Senator Bridges, announced candidate for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination who has been stumping the country in behalf of uninstructed Republican delegations.

Former Senator George Moses immediately called it a Bridges vote and declared, "New Hampshire now has an opportunity after more than a half century to make a bold bid for the Presidency." Bridges expressed, "My gratitude to the people of New Hampshire for the confidence they have shown in me."

Other G. O. P. Presidential candidates had shunned the primaries as "favorite son" territory, but one candidate for delegate, pledged to New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, insisted on making the race and was badly defeated. Likewise, no full Democratic slates had been entered against the Roosevelt draft ticket. Three pledged to Postmaster General Farley and one to Vice President Garner were outdistanced.

Lively Competition

In the Wisconsin primaries April 2 there will be more lively competition all around. There Garner is running in opposition to two separate third term tickets, threatening a divided Roosevelt vote unless one slate withdraws. Full delegate slates have been entered there by Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, against Dewey in the G. O. P. primaries, and the result may make or break the nomination hopes of each.

Meanwhile a second State legislative resolution protesting a third term for any President was en route to Congress, as the Rhode Island Assembly followed the lead of the Republican-controlled New York Legislature in petitioning Congress to enact a law holding Presidential terms to two.

Following lunch with the President, Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, said they had discussed the "probability" of a Republican defeat in November. Minton said the President agreed with his opinion that Dewey can expect no more than the G. O. P. Vice Presidential nomination. Both agreed Dewey would not head the Republican ticket, Minton said.

Edison Orders Shipbuilding Reorganization

Secretary Moves For Centralizing Naval Construction

Secretary Edison yesterday ordered further reorganization of the Navy shipbuilding bureaus to centralize control.

The procurement and installation of armor plate on ships was transferred from the Bureau of Ordnance to the Bureau of Construction and Repair under the order. Already the work of the latter agency has been merged with that of the Bureau of Engineering, and the newest move will place all shipbuilding under one agency.

Edison termed the old set-up "outmoded" and "clumsy," saying it dates from the days when armor plate was bolted to wooden ships. He compared the old divided authority over shipbuilding to having two architects for building a house, one for the outside and the other for the inside.

Meanwhile, Representative Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the special House subcommittee on naval reorganization, introduced a bill to give legal effect to Edison's consolidations by setting up a Bureau of Ships in place of the Bureau of Engineering and the Bureau of Construction and Repair.

The measure, however, did not include provision for a director of shore operations who would be technical naval man, as recommended by Secretary Edison. Instead of creating an office of shore operations to coordinate all naval industrial facilities, the bill provides a special assistant secretary for such work.

Another provision of the bill gives the Chief of Naval Operations authority to coordinate and generally direct all phases of the Navy except that he shall have control over the military features only of naval industrial matters. Darden said the other members of his subcommittee were in general accord with the bill.

Under the new Navy order, the Bureau of Ordnance will continue to have jurisdiction over guns, bombs and other other ordnance matters, including the testing of steel for armor plate.

Rep. Hoffman Demonstrates Triangular Diaper Theory, Saying Ickes Errs

HOFFMAN

Explaining he made the demonstration to show that Secretary of the Interior Ickes doesn't know anything about pinning diapers, Representative Clara Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, placed a towel on a table in front of the Speaker's rostrum and made his demonstrtion—with one pin.

Hoffman said Ickes, even though he is a father of a baby, revealed ignorance about diaper pinning when, in attacking District Attorney Dewey, of New York, he suggested diapers be pinned both front and back. This method, Hoffman said, is outmoded.

Tacoma, March 13 (AP).—Senator Bone, who had been recuperating for six months from a hip fracture received in a fall at his home, is en route by train to resume his duties at Washington.

The Senator said he was "feeling better today than I have for several years."

Representative Landis (Republican), Indiana, announced yesterday he was organizing the Indiana members of Congress in opposition to legislation to require marble exteriors for all Federal buildings in the new "Northwest Triangle" area here.

The area is the site of the new War and Navy Department buildings. Plans approved for the War Department building call for the use of limestone for exterior finishing.

A bill introduced by Representative Hobbs (Democrat), Alabama, would prohibit the use of limestone on the exterior of any of the Federal buildings in the area, regardless of agreements or contracts already made.

It cost Congress $2,294 to shake hands with he King and Queen of Great Britain last summer.

The item was disclosed yesterday when testimony before a House Appropriations sub-committee was made public. The House and the Senate split the bill evenly. The expenses were largely for floral decorations, velvet ropes and other incidentals.

The House passed unanimously and sent to the Senate a $23,907,744 appropriation bill carrying funds to run Congress for the years starting July 1, including the salaries of Congressmen and their clerks.

Representative Carter (Republican), of California, provoked the only controversy when he tried unsuccessfully to eliminate a provision which he said would permit the Capitol physician to furnish medicine for the entire House membership.

His amendment was shouted down after several members declared that had it not been for the attention of the physician, Dr. George W. Calver, "I would not be here today."

The bill carried $626,301 more than was voted for the current fiscal year. The bulk of the increase was due to an additional clerk allowed each Senator and Representative.

Goss Resigns From FCA

cut to 3 per cent farm loan interest rates, now fixed at 3½ per cent on land bank loans and first-mortgage obligations and 4 per cent on land bank commissioner loans and second-mortgage obligations.

Text of the formal statement issued by Goss follows:

"For 25 years I have been doing what I could to help build a farmer-managed cooperative credit system based on personal integrity, a proper selection of risks, and joint responsibility. These principles, honestly followed, will cut losses to a minimum and thus assure the cheapest money and best terms available. While not everybody can be served directly by such a system, it acts as a pace maker and controls, in large measure, the rates and terms of all farm mortgage lenders.

"Now the distinct tendency is toward a type of so-called credit in which personal responsibility is denied, loans are made to everybody, no adequate margin of safety is provided, and the Government pays the loss whenever the borrower wants to quit paying.

"I suppose my leaving the Farm Credit Administration has its origin in the sharp conflict between these two basic ideas.

"I hope the foundations of a sound credit system have been so firmly laid that they will withstand the efforts being made in this election year to use it for political purposes. Farmers should never forget that lending them deeper into debt is no substitute for lack of income, and that under sound farm conditions with fair prices, mortgage credit ceases to be a grievous problem. Through 23 years of sound operation they have built up an independent credit standing almost equal to that of the Government itself and they should not lightly surrender this cooperative credit system in order to embark on experiments in "socialized credit." To ask them to do so is comparable to asking commercial banks to meet the unemployment situation because they have plenty of money to lend. To require them to do so by regulation or legislation in the face of their outspoken opposition is reprehensible."

Goss told The Post the Jones bill is typical of a tendency "to try to solve the farm problem by lending more and more money. And each new loan bill gets softer and softer."

The Jones measure, "in an effort to aid some very worthy farmers in the drought area," would "wreck a successful cooperative credit system serving the whole Nation," he asserted.

Questioned on the bill introduced by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, which would place the FCA under an independent Federal Farm Credit Board, Goss said he thought the measure would "provide a sound basis for continunity in farm credit policy." The Gillette bill would set up a bipartisan board with five members serving ten-year-terms.

Goss is the third high official of the FCA to resign since President Roosevelt's reorganization order of July 1, 1939, which transferred the agency to the Department of Agriculture.

F. F. Hill resigned as governor of the agency last December 20 after President Roosevelt supported Secretary Wallace's contention that the FCA should be merged into the Agriculture Department. Peyton Evans, general counsel, left the FCA March 1.

Successor to Goss, it was reliably reported, will be Roy Green, now deputy governor of the FCA.

Can't Block Hatch Bill, Minton Admits

Pledges No Filibuster After Luncheon With Roosevelt

By John B. Oakes.

The leading opponent of the Hatch bill, prohibiting political activity to all governmental employes paid with Federal funds, conceded after luncheon with President Roosevelt yesterday that the bill would be passed.

Senator Minton, of Indiana, majority whip and generalissimo of the Democratic forces fighting the measure, confessed on the White House steps that he believed he faced defeat in his ten-day battle, and denied any intention of filibustering.

Soon after he returned to the Capitol from his interview with the President, Senator Minton—who has been bitterly opposed to Majority Leader Barkley throughout the fight—took the floor to reaffirm his loyalty to the leadership.

"Prodigal Will Return"

When the Hatch issue is settled, he said, "I'm coming back to my leader. The prodigal will return—and we'll be fighting together on those things that the New Deal is really interested in."

Although both Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, and Senator Barkley reaffirmed their hope that a final vote on the bill would be reached today, it was recognized that a flood of pending amendments might postpone conclusive Senate action until tomorrow.

Progress on the bill yesterday continued to be sure, but decidedly slow. A vote was taken on only one amendment, a proposal to limit the size of campaign contributions to $1,000.

Offered by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, the amendment met the same fate as virtually all others presented thus far. It was defeated, 45 to 36, at the hands of the now familiar coalition of the Democratic minority led by Senators Barkley and Hatch, and a solid bloc of Republicans.

After a brief, but spirited conference, however, a bottle of ginger ale was substituted, and this Mrs. Thompson heaved against a supporting wall of the tunnel entrance.

The champagne, it turned out, was saved for a purpose. With five other bottles it became refreshments for the dignitaries in the assemblage—and all others who were able to pass paper containers under the sparkling fluid.

Wire-Tapping by G-Men 'Entirely Legal,' Hoover Says

Method Used Only When Lives Were At Stake, He Asserts as Senate Is Asked for Funds to Probe FBI

By International News Service

G-Men have resorted to wire-tapping "only in extraordinary situations and in an entirely legal manner," J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, declared yesterday.

Only in cases in which human lives were at stake, such as kidnapings, or in cases of "an aggravated criminal nature" has the FBI tapped wires. In these rare cases, he emphasized, wires were tapped only to obtain information and not as a basis for criminal prosecution.

The statement was inspired by reports that some Federal investigative agencies have resorted to wire-tapping. The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee has requested $25,000 to investigate the reports and this move has been interpreted in some quarters as a New Deal effort to "smear" some branch of the Republican party.

Proposed by Green

Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, author of the resolution, issued a statement late yesterday denying his proposed investigation was directed at Hoover or the FBI. Asserting the investigation was "not aimed at any one in particular, but at the practice of wire-tapping in general," Green added:

"I have the greatest feeling of regard for Mr. Hoover, for the splendid work he has done in law enforcement, and for the efficient and excellent organization he has built up. . . .

"As a matter of fact, this investigation into wire-tapping practices was partly the result of evidence uncovered by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in my State."

Hoover Denies Allegations

In a statement, Hoover said:

"Recently statements have been reported in the press and have been made otherwise indicating that representatives of the FBI have indiscriminately tapped the telephones of members of Congress. This is untrue. At no time has the telephone of any member of Congress been tapped by any representative of the FBI since I have been director of this bureau."

Senator Byrnes (Democrat) of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Audit and Control Committee, called a meeting of his group next Wednesday to study the plea for $25,000 for the inquiry.

Senate Cloture May Be Asked On Lynch Bill

Debate Limit Sought On Filibuster Hint; Judicial Body Approves

By the Associated Press

Proponents of antilynching legislation announced yesterday they would seek to invoke the Senate's drastic, seldom-used cloture rule to curtail debate if the legislation encounters a Southern filibuster.

A House-approved bill, imposing criminal penalties on peace officers who fail to use diligence in protecting prisoners and making political subdivisions liable for civil damages where lynchings occur because of official negligence, received the approval of a judiciary subcommittee, 8 to 1, during the day.

Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, of the subcommittee, forecast favorable action by the full committee within two weeks and asserted that the bill would have the support of at least 65 Senators if brought to a vote.

"While I am opposed to cloture as a general proposition," Van Nuys said, "the long legislative history of this bill and the very evident popularity it has among the majority of the people justify use of cloture in this pecific instance."

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, expressed the opinion that the chances of thwarting a filibuster by that means would be "very good."

Ordinarily any Senator may speak as long as he chooses, and minorities frequently are successful in blocking legislation by talking until it is dropped. Under cloture, which the Senate usually is reluctant to apply, no Senator may speak more than an hour nor more than once. A two-third vote is required to put it into effect.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, who cast the only subcommittee vote against the legislation, told reporters that Southern members would "resist its passage with all the endurance and fortitude of which they are capable."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra presents and cooperates with Les Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo in Constitution Hall Wednesday night. Program: "Carnaval" (music by Schumann) "La Boutique Fantasque" (music by Rossini), "The Blue Bird" from "The Sleeping Beauty" (music by Chaikovski), "Capriccio Espagnol" (music by Rimski-Korsakov). Conductors: Franz Allers and Hans Kindler.

Ray C. Brown

Ending a brief and congenial companionship of two days, Les Ballets Eusses de Monte Carlo and the National Symphony Orchestra collaborated last evening in a delightful entertainment of which the clou was Leonid Miassin's new choreographic tourbillon to the music of Rimski-Karsakov's "Capriccio Espagnol." The intense vitality emanating from these Spanish dances made the mere watching an excitement, and the finale was a frenzied climax of whirling figures that had the inevitable effect of rousing to a storm of applause the spectators crowding Constitution Hall. It was a bang-up finish to a highly successful engagement.

Just how much "Capriccio Espagnol" owes to Argentinita's suggestions of regional dance steps and how much to Miassin's unerring sense of theater is something that those two creators of the ballet must settle between them. The combination certainly proved irresistible. Miassin's solo and pas de deux with Nathalia Krasovska demonstrated afresh the dominance of his personality. The moment that he came upon the stage, one was aware of his superlative showmanship, and as long as he remained his presence was a vivid spot in the kaleidoscopic movement of the dancers.

Such a dance as his in this ballet cannot accurately be called Spanish nor can he be said to typify a real gypsy, but the resemblances were sufficiently illusive. The way in which he unites finesse of gesture, as in the curling of his hands as the dance begins, with a complete abandon of bodily suppleness, as in the turning aerial leaps, proves his superiority in mastery of technique.

Another particularly striking passage in the Rimski caprice was the Asturian fandango of Alexandra Danilova and Andre Eglevski who were captivating partners. Eglevski, who has a remarkable lightness in his elevations and a plie second to none, was twice the focus of attention during the evening. He was the recipient of a wreath from admirers after his feats in "The Bluebird" with Alicia Markova.

The two other ballets on the program were "La Boutique Fantasque," that amusing phantasmagoria of an enchanted toyshop, and Schumann's "Carnival." In the latter Igor Yuskevich danced the Harlequin role made famous by Nizhinski and did it excellently, while the coquettish Columbine was Mia Slavenska.

Despite thankfulness for two new ballets in this engagement, one must regret that Miassin did not also give us the American ballet, "Ghost Town," recently, added to the repertoire. From all reports that have come this way, the atmosphere of "Ghost Town" is so unmistakably native as to make the dancers seem American rather than imported. It would have been interesting to observe if this is true.

Pinocchio and Ice Cream To Delight Crippled Children

Movies and ice cream, twin loves of childhood but which are unknown to many crippled children in impoverished homes, will reign supreme next Thursday morning over the Capital's physically handicapped boys and girls.

Tentative arrangements were made yesterday for transportation to and from RKO-Keith's Theater of the hundreds of youngsters who will be guests at a "Pinocchio" preview party. The special performance, coming a full day in advance of the first public showing of the Walt Disney feature, will be exclusively for crippled and physically handicapped children.

The Washington Rotary Club volunteered to place its new bus at the disposal of The Post, which is cooperating with Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, in locating the free customers and arranging for their transportation.

President Frank L. Peckham of the Washington Kiwanis Club heartily indorsed the "Pinocchio" party and said his organization will cooperate in every way possible.

Mrs. Odetta O'Hara, president of the Association for Education of Handicapped Children, said she and other members will be glad to help arrange transportation and assist the theater staff in seating the children. Many will view the picture from wheel chairs

The Health Security Administration, where parents go daily to arrange for hospitalization or clinic treatment of crippled children, also will cooperate in locating eligibles and seeing to it that they reach the theater and get home, said Administrator Ross Garrett.

Children's Hospital, the crippled children's clinic of Gallinger Hospital, and other institutions caring for physically handicapped minors, will do the same thing. So will the Washington Heart Association, which ministers to youngsters suffering from cardiac diseases.

Mrs. Beulah J. Drake, head teacher of crippled children at Langdon School, said arrangements will be made for her charges to be excused from classes Thursday morning so they may attend the special premiere. The performance will begin at 9 o'clock, and will be over at 10:30.

Keith's announced yesterday that Southern Dairies has volunteered to present each child attending the showing with an ice cream cup.

If you are a child, or have a child wishing to attend the show, or if you are an adult with an automobile who would like to transport young passengers to the theater, read the following suggestions:

The performance will begin at 9 o'clock next Thursday morning, March 21, and tardiness is to be avoided.

It will be most convenient to pick up children in groups at a central meeting place, such as a school, hospital, community center or settlement house. Therefore, parents should first communicate with the institution which their children regularly visit, which in turn will notify the city editor of The Post by letter as soon as possible how many boys and girls are to be picked up.

Parents of children who do not have any outside connections of that nature may communicate directly with The Post city editor, giving the child's name and address.

Persons willing to call for and take home one or more youngsters should write the city editor, giving their names, adidresses and the number to be accommodated. They will be informed of the names and addresses of their prospective charges, every effort to be made to assign children living in the car donors' neighborhoods.

The March 21 premiere will be for white children. A performance for colored boys and girls who are crippled will be held on a later date, to be announced.

In cases where a child, because of physical disability, must be accompanied by a parent or some other attendant, the adult will be admitted to the showing.

Manager Meakin and the entire house staff of RKO-Keith's Theater will be on hand to handle the crowd, assisted by volunteer workers, hence parents of children who are able to take care of themselves in spite of their afflictions need not feel obliged to accompany them.

Okla. Dam Work Continues As Martial Law Is Declared

By the Associated Press

Disney, Okla., March 13.—Three Oklahoma National Guard officers clamped martial law on the Grand River Dam tonight but work on the $20,000,000 hydro-electric project was permitted to continue.

Seventy National Guardsmen remained at Wagoner, south of here, prepared to move into the dam area under the martial law decree issued by Gov. Phillips.

Phillips expressed determination that State roads and bridges in the 52,000-acre reservoir in northeastern Oklahoma shall not be flooded until the Public Works Administration puts up the cost or posts bonds for relocation expense.

Maj. H. P. Parris entered the office of I. N. Towne, superintendent of construction, shortly after 9 p. m. The officer said he had been instructed to place the area under martial law.

"My orders are to stop the work insofar as impeding the flow of the river is concerned," he told Towne.

Towne told the officer that work now being done would not impede the river's flow. The major then agreed other work in progress could continue.

The three officers planned to remain at the dam.

Phillips also turned to the courts today, directing Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson to seek an injunction in State court to prevent closing of the last gap in the dam.

In Washington, Clark Foreman, head of the PWA power division, hinted court action might be forthcoming.

Phillips, who seeks $850,000 damages for the State, retorted that court action would not prevail against his use of troops.

He said the PWA was to blame, and that if the State obtained a judgment now for the damages it would take 50 years to collect them unless the Government set aside funds now for that purpose.

Phillips had little comment concerning critical statements by the State's two Democratic United States Senators, Josh Lee and Elmer Thomas.

Tax Proposed On All Income Earned in D. C.

Bates' Plan Evades 'Domicile' Controversy; Committee Meets Today

elsewhere should not be required to pay income taxes to the District government. Sweeney's view was upheld in effect on Monday by the United States Court of Appeals when it invalidated an intangible personal property tax assessed against Sweeney.

"I am strongly of the conviction," Bates said, "that anyone who resides in Washington the year around and receives the benefit of its municipal services ought to pay for these services."

The Bates plan is expected to run head-on into objections from other members of the House subcommittee who are prepared to revive the Pond formula of a combined 2 per cent sales tax and a personal income levy on earned incomes in excess of $10,000.

Chairman Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, is sponsoring the dual tax again and has the support of one and possibly two members of the subcommittee.

Like New York's Tax

The fact that many States are not so liberal as Massachusetts in granting deductions for taxes paid to other jurisdictions is expected to complicate the problem.

Representative Bates, who offered the successful income tax motion in the House last year, said that he had discussed the District's tax dilemma with Henry F. Long, Massachusetts tax commissioner, on a week-end visit to his home State.

Long pointed out that New York imposes a tax on the income of nonresidents earned in New York and that the nearby States recognize the justice of the levy and allow deductions in their own tax collections.

Maryland and Virginia, Bates pointed out, have reciprocal provisions which would apply to Government employes and others who live in suburban Washington and work in the Capital.

The practical operation of the reciprocal tax provision, Bates explained, is that the taxpayer pays the levy on his earned income first to the jurisdiction where it is earned, and then pays the difference to the State of his domicile.

Opposition in Congress

The Bates' solution has several hurdles to clear, District officials pointed out before it could be written into law. As originally drafted, it was recalled, the District income tax applied to income earned within the National Capital.

Opposition came from two quarters, however, although it was prior to the Supreme Court ruling that Federal salaries might be taxed by the States.

Members of Congress disliked the idea of paying a tax to the District and yet disliked adopting a provision specifically exempting themselves. Then Representatives and Senators from Maryland and Virginia raised objections in behalf of their constituents on the Government pay roll.

Since then the situation has changed so that Government workers living in the adjacent States are to be taxed and at higher rates than they would be by the District.

The problem created by the Court of Appeals decision regarding exemption from local taxes is having repercussions in Maryland and Virginia, which have large suburban populations of Government workers, many of whom maintain legal residence in other States.

Informal interpretations, however, indicated that the States will insist upon collection of their own taxes irrespective of the claim of domicile elsewhere.

Consequently, several thousand Government employes will be faced, it appeared, with the alternative of paying two State income taxes or transferring their legal voting residences.

ters as willing to accept amendments which would improve the administration of the law without impairing the principle of collective bargaining.

Mr. Roosevelt's reported qualification raised a question as to whether he would approve appreciable changes in the basic provisions of the act. The trend of administration thinking, however, was believed to have been indicated by Wagner, in a Senate speech attacking the Smith proposals. He said he would not object to increasing the NLRB membership from three to five.

Mrs. Norton indicated that such a change would be acceptable to her.

She said, following the House Labor Committee meeting, that she thought the committee "will report something." This will likely be a committee bill, however, she indicated, instead of any of the bills pending before the committee.

Corporation Is Accused As Russ Agent

Jacob Raisin (alias J. N. Golos) and World Tourists, Inc., a New York corporation, were indicted in the District Court here yesterday on charges of failing to register with the Department of State as Russian propagandists.

The indictments were the first result of eight weeks of investigation by an extraordinary grand jury requested by the Department of Justice early in the year. Special Assistant Attorneys General Floyd M. Rett, Henry G. O'Donnell and Durward Balch have examined scores of witnesses in an effort to determine the activities of foreign agents in Washington.

The indictment, presented before Justice Peyton Gordon, asserted Raisin "was the sole stockholder and a director and officer of World Tourists, Inc."

Raisin was understood to be in New York and was expected to be arraigned here in a few days.

on contract for the army and navy to their needs. Rumors of a split in the Cabinet over the matter have complicated the picture.

Secretary Edison denied any pressure had been put on the Navy to release its latest planes other than a suggestion from the interdepartmental coordinating committee headed by Secretary Morgenthau that they help where they can.

Johnson said the Army had six types of planes superior to the P-40 or other models made available to foreign buyers which "have not been released and that no request for their release has been officially made of the War Department."

He said these were the Douglas attack bomber, A-20A, the North American B-25 bomber, the Bell P-39 pursuit-interceptor, the Republic P-44 and Curtis P46 pursuit ships, and the Martin B-26 bomber.

Admiral Towers said that besides the Grumman, the Navy had released three other models since last summer. They are the Brewster fighters, sold to Finland, the Vought SB-2U, and the two-engined patrol boat PBY-1.

Allied eagernes to buy American planes is believed traceable to reports of continued German superiority in aircraft production. According to diplomatic circles here, the Reich is now turning out 2,300 planes monthly and will be up to 6000 by September, while Britain reached a peak of 1,200, but has dropped back to 800, due to need for retooling for later models. The French output was estimated at between 265 and 400 a month.

American production of civil and military planes is about 1,400 a month, officials said.

Winney Death Laid to Traffic By Coroner

93-Year-Old Victim Was Hurt February 10; 2 Inquests Ordered

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald late yesterday decided that George Winney, 93, of 638 Second street northwest, who died at Gallinger Hospital Tuesday, was a District traffic victim—the fifteenth this year.

The coroner will hold inquests today into the deaths Tuesday of Summerset S. Robey, 70, of 1359½ Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and Jerry J. Hannagan, 37, of 9 Grant circle northwest.

An autopsy at the District Morgue yesterday revealed that Winney succumbed from injuries received when he was knocked down by a truck February 10, in the 200 block of H street northwest. Police reports stated that Winney stepped from the curb and was struck by a truck operated by Raymond Miller, 25, of Station A, Conduit road, Georgetown, D. C. He will appear at an inquest.

Robey, an employe of the Capital Transit Co., was killed when he was struck by one of that firm's street cars in the 1300 block Pennsylvania avenue southeast. He was walking to catch a trolley to work.

Hannagan died at Emergency Hospital a short time after he was knocked down on Constitution avenue northwest, between Tenth and Twelfth streets. Police said the automobile which struck him was operated by Arthur Stephens, 42, of 2300 Eighteenth street northwest.

Last year's traffic death toll at this time was 20.

2 Seized Here in Gaming Raid

Two men were charged with violations of the gaming laws yesterday following a raid on a private home at 6321 Fourteenth street northwest, five blocks from the Sixth Precinct Station.

Both men were seized in the cellar, which was equipped with a mahogany desk and heavy rugs. They were the only occupants.

They identified themselves as Nathan Paul Cohen, 30, of 6321 Fourteenth street northwest, and Kermit Schell, 35, of 132 Jefferson street northwest. Both were charged with setting up a gaming table, operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips, and were released under $1,500 bonds.

Under the supervision of Lieut. Earl P. Hartman, the raiders entered the house shortly after 4 p. m.

Some of the receipt books seized showed a daily income of more than $1,200, police reported. Other books reputedly were divided according to customers' names and showed various entries under the heading "win and lose."

A Book for All of Us Who Realize How Little We Learned at School . . .

How to Read a Book is a practical guide to the art of acquiring a liberal education. Although it is not a "how to" book in the Dale Carnegie sense, it does lay down specific rules, teaching the reader how to use his reading time intelligently, profitably and with pleasure.

Most people think they know how to read a book. But this one will make them realize that the basic technique of proper reading is unknown to most of us who consider ourselves well read. It is a book for all of us who feel that something has gone wrong with our education but do not know quite what the trouble is—for students and teachers, for those who missed getting an education during their school years and those who have been trying to get one in spite of school and college.

The author, together with President Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago, has been in the thick of the current controversy about "progressive education." Those who hold with them that a proper American education must be based on an acquaintance with the whole liberal tradition of Western thought from Homer to Einstein will welcome this book. Finnish Peace British Blow, Germany Says

Press Recalls March A Momentous Month In Nazi History

B. C. Brooks Peters.

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, March 13.—Termination of the Russo-Finnish conflict was celebrated in Berlin today as the loss of the first great battle by the "plutocratic" Allied powers in their struggle with the Third Reich.

With the cessation of hostilities in the North, the Germans claim that the imminent possibility of France and Britain effecting an extension of the warring fronts to Scandinavia, southeastern Europe or the Near East, with consequent further tightening of their blockade of the Reich and scattering the latter's fighting forces, has been eliminated.

In the German view the neutral nations of the North, of the Continent and of the Near East cannot help but consider the negative value which Allied promises have had for Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and Finland and adjust their future policies accordingly. This, the Germans believe, is particularly true now that Russia is no longer occupied in the north and can devote her entire energies to guarding her interests elsewhere.

Warning to Nordics

Nonetheless warnings are issued by her, particularly to the Scandinavian countries, to refrain from "unreasonable optimism." For the Germans assert the Allied efforts to strike at the Reich through neutrals will not cease merely because of a single major frustration.

For the present, however, the Germans declare that the situation is very favorable to them.

In the Balkans, they assert, there is not one single power which wishes to become involved in the present conflict. The only potential obstacle to peace in the southeast, they allege, lies in the Anglo-Turkish treaty.

The "defeat" suffered by the Allies and the approaching Ides of March have in no way tempered expressions of German opinion that, taking the Voelkischer Beobachter's viewpoint, there will not be any truce until both powers in the west break down under the blows of Germany's armed forces.

March Career Recalled

Seemingly well-founded rumors furthermore suggest that dancing will be prohibited Friday as it was during the Polish campaign and the curfew hour will be made earlier than 1 a. m. as it is now.

Thursday's Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung moreover states editorially that "the month of March has made history annually in National Socialist Germany." To the big words, bigger claims and blindly enraged hate of the Allied statesmen, it adds, "the unmistakeable German answer of the Fuehrer the answer of the entire German will for victory in March of 1940 applies."

Official quarters in Berlin continue to maintain silence relative to the part played by the Reich in furthering the Russo-Finnish peace negotiations. It is suggested here, however, that the Russians desired military occupation of a larger portion of Finland, including Helsinski, but that friendly pressure exerted by Germany succeeded in effecting face-saving terms for the Finns.

Pope Stresses Peace, Justice Twice in 2 Days

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 13.—Twice in two days the Pope has gone out of his way to speak of the necessity for justice as well as peace, and Vatican circles take this as an emphasis of his stern demand to Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, that Germany right the injustices she has done before there can be peace.

More and more confirmation and details have been coming out concerning the Von Ribbenthrop visit. For one thing, he is reliably understood to have told Pope Pius that the pesent war is "absurd" and that it ought to end as soon as possible.

He gave the impression that Germany is continuing the war unwillingly. By contrast, in Italian circles he seems to have left the impression that Germany was preparing to intensify her war and even launch a great spring offensive.

The German envoy boasted about having worked for the end of the Russo-Finnish war. Contrary to reports published abroad, he did not ask for the Pope's intervention with President Roosevelt to obtain mediation. However, he did speak of President Roosevelt with deference, indicating that Germany would take any eventual proposals of the President into consideration.

It was also learned today for the first time that the Pontiff, in the burning words he spoke to Von Ribbentrop about religious persecution, also came to the defense of the Jews in Germany and Poland.

All authorities still agree that the crux of the whole interview was the Pope's insistence that there can be no peace until Germany has righted the injustices she has done.

War Work Found Lagging In Factories of Rhineland

By Anne O'Hare McCormick.

(Wireless—Copyright 1940 by The New York Times)

Brussels, March 13.—The increasing difficulty of maintaining industrial production at a war tempo was one reason behind German anxiety to end the fighting in Finland. This also helps to explain why preparations for a great military offensive go forward simultaneously with a drive for peace.

Every sign in Germany today indicates urgency. The chief impression one carries away is that the great test of strength must be risked soon or not at all.

With the cessation of hostilities in Finland the German supply line is safer. Russia is freed to defend the Baku oil fields, supplies from Sweden are in less danger of being cut off and Soviet deliveries to the Reich are likely to increase.

Production Lags

But the acquisition of raw materials is only one factor in the supply problem. The military effort depends on two others almost equally important. The fabrication of these materials at the required rate implies the utmost cooperation with the government on the part of manufacturers on the one hand and labor on the other.

In the Rhineland, as I passed through yesterday, there were many evidences of a slackening in the rhythm of production, due not to shortage of raw materials, but to a slow down of labor. It was learned that approximately 30 per cent of the workers do not turn up on Mondays in the great plants in the Ruhr district.

In one factory, normally employing 2,000 men, 3,000 are kept on the pay roll in an effort to maintain the ordinary production level, while the average number at work is only 1,500. As far as production is concerned the effect of the 60-hour week is practically nullified.

According to the best information available, the workers' attitude is not the result of subversive activities or a movement to sabotage production. Partly it is a form of resistance to the long hours, but mostly it reflects the weariness characteristic of the population.

Raising wages would have no effect. Since the necessities of life are strictly rationed and luxuries are too expensive for the ordinary worker to buy, he has no inducement to earn more money than he can spend. One manufacturer manages to keep a full force at work six days a week by distributing food not on the ration cards and putting a large proportion of real coffee into the mixture served to his employes.

Punishment has no effect either. There are severe penalties for labor truancy and at first the absentees were arrested and fined, but the number of laggards is now too great for these measures.

In pre-Hitler days, when Communists were numerous in the Ruhr plants, a manufacturer could not walk through his factory without being insulted. But now employers and employes are in the same boat, both under government control, and a bond of sympathy has developed between them. The industrialist has no more incentive than the men to increase his earnings.

The gerat incentive—of straining every nerve to win the war—seems to be as lacking in one group as the other.

In the Rhine cities Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop's visit to the Pope is interpreted as an attempt to win support in this strategic zone, almost entirely Catholic. Obviously support of the regime is very lukewarm, but there is no real rebellion, because no group in the Reich knows what kind of government could replace the present regime without a terrible breakdown.

Everywhere in Germany the causes that led up to the conflict are subordinated to the fear of the terms which will be imposed if the other side wins. The Rhineland especially fears partition and at a showdown this fear is perhaps strong enough to overcome all other feelings.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills

Writer Urges U. S. Subsidies To Help Allies

Barnet Nover Favors Gifts Instead of War Loans If Aid Is Needed

Direct subsidies to the Allies for the conduct of the war if and when they need men were advocated last night by Narnet Nover, Washington Post foreign affairs writer, in an address at the Jewish Community Center.

America should be able to avoid "military participation" in the European war "if we use our economic power intelligently," he told 300 persons at a meeting sponsored by the educational committee of the center.

"No nation is neutral in the world today," he said. "We are not neutral, and nobody else is." The beliefs that the war is "phoney," that peace could be made now as well as any time, or that "each side is as bad as the other," he said are spread "only by fools and propagandists," and serve the interests of Germany.

Expects U. S. Neutrality

Expressing the belief that the United States will "probably" stay out of the war, he said that aim alone is not sufficient basis for our policy.

"Peace is a by-product, like happiness or love," he said. "You do not get it directly, you get it as a result of other things. Peace as the be-all and end-all of a policy has failed in every instance.

"We should help the Allies in every way we can. They don't need our military or naval help, and they don't need our financial help yet, though they may before long.

Opposes War Loans

"When that time comes I hope we don't make loans; we should follow the cynical, hard-boiled but intelligent policy the British have traditionally used, in financing others to do their fighting for them."

Pointing out that money loaned during the last war was never repaid, he said it would be better to give the Allies funds outright "if they come to the end of their resources."

He advocated using America's economic resources to help the Allies, and not raising too great objections against the restrictions involved in the British blockade of Germany. The repeal of the arms embargo at the outset of the war, he said, was a step in the right direction.

Germans Seize Norwegian Ship

Copyright by New York Times

Bergen, Norway, March 13.—The Norwegian steamer Balder, 1,600 tons, en route from Drammen to Bergen, has been seized by a German naval vessel. Officials are puzzled because the Germans had no reason to seize the vessel, which was in ballast and sailing between two Norwegian ports.

Allies Expect to Spend $4,000,000,000 in 3 Months

By the Associated Press

London, March 13.—The Allied governments today revealed they expect the next three months of war to cost them $4,000,000,000 or more than $40,000,000 a day.

The British government, estimating its spending at £6,500,000 ($26,000,000) daily, asked Parliament to appropriate a £700,000,000 ($2,800,000,000) lump sum for conduct of the war for an unspecified period. At the daily estimate made by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, however, that sum would last for less than four months.

The Commons approved the request 192 to 2, despite a plea of the leftist firebrand, J. McGovern, for an attempt to end the war before the "tremendous slaughter begins." He declared his Independent Labor party proposed there should be an armistice and world conference at the earliest possible moment.

Paris Puts Up $1,027,000,000

In Paris the Chamber of Deputies finance committee approved a proposed government expenditure of 55,400,000,000 francs (about $1,027,000,000) for war purposes for the second three months of 1940.

Simon said £300,000,000 ($1,200,000,000) out of a £500,000,000 fund appropriated last September had been spent and predicted another £100,000,000 would be spent by April 1.

Sir John's request for more funds, made in the House of Commons, coincided with closing of the public sale of Britain's first loan of the war.

Unofficial estimates were that the £300,000,000 (about $1,200,000,000), 3 per cent, 15 to 19 year issue, was oversubscribed by as much as 50 per cent. An official statement by the Bank of England was expected later.

Sir John divided up Britain's daily war expenses thus:

Army, navy and air force—about £4,000,000.

Air raid precautions, shipping and food, £1,000,000.

Other government expenses, £1,500,000.

He declared the government, attempting to hold down prices, was taking a loss on meat and other supplies over which it has established monopolies.

Premier Daladier and Finance Minister Reynaud personally presented the 55,400,000,000-franc request to the finance committee. The military credits demanded were higher than the 54,937,000,000 francs (about $1,242,000,000) granted for the first three months of 1940.

$3,000,000 For Radio

With civil budget needs, France therefore intends to spend 334,000,000,000 francs (about $7,114,200,000), nearly two-and-a-half times the original peacetime budget of 1939, which was 136,000,000,000 francs (about $2,896,800,000).

The committee also approved these supplementary expenses for 1940: For general defense needs, 6,350,000,000 francs (about $20,448,000); for powder, 74,300,000 francs (about $1,582,590); for government radio propaganda 189,300,000 (about $3,042,090).

Procope Asks Help for Finns, Funds Needed

Father Walsh Cites Reconstruction Task; Kallio Appeals to U. S.

The war was over in Finland yesterday, but not the task of helping Finland.

A statement of his country's position and needs last night was issued by Hjalmar J. Procope, Minister of Finland. It follows:

"I have not yet received official information about the details of the treaty concluded between Finland and Russia. My information is based upon ordinary news channels which have been giving the terms of the treaty.

"Finland has been fighting against overwhelming odds. She has shown that a small nation can resist an aggression and can do her duty in the defense of the highest ideals of mankind. She has fought alone and finally she has been forced to make peace.

Still A Free Country

"The peace is hard, but Finland is not defeated. Finland is still a free democratic country and Finland will continue to fulfill her duty amongst other free peoples.

"The sacrifices and the suffering of Finland at this moment are heavy. Her needs in food, clothing and medical supplies and for the restoration of her devastated homes are great and urgent.

"The assistance of the American people in meeting these needs has been and is still of vital importance to us."

The Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., chairman of the Washington Unit of the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc., announced that the organization would not slacken in its crusade to help the wounded, the orphans and the dispossessed defenders of human liberty in Finland.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, vice chairman of the fighting Funds for Finland organization, said she hoped it would continue to help that republic lest it go the way of Czecho-Slovakia.

Father Walsh made public a cablegram received by Herbert Hoover, national chairman of the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc., from President Kyosti Kallio of Finland. This said in part:

"Deeply grateful for the humanitarian aid which, through your philanthropic activities, we have received during the Finnish war for the relief of the distressed.

"Signed a Compulsory Peace"

"I hope with all my heart that it will continue to alleviate the lot of the suffering on account of the war, for the population of the ceded areas will be moved into the territory of the Republic.

"We have signed a compulsory peace, yet we hope that our struggle for the right has gained us the sympathy of the civilized world and trust that we shall not be left to our own resources in the work of reconstruction."

Father Walsh emphasized that the Finnish-Soviet treaty would not mean the end of the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc.

Mrs. Bacon, in whose home the Washington chapter of Fighting Funds for Finland was organized February 28, said that Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, national chairman, would have to speak for the organization.

Japanese, Soviets Renew Fighting

suggests the United States wanted to extricate the Russians from Finland to free them for adentures against Japan.

"We must carefully consider," says Asahi, "why the United States did not want to see the Red Army continue the struggle in Finland's marshes which left it no scope in other directions."

Despite this alleged evidence of American encouragement, Asahi tells its readers the Red Armies have lost too much blood and prestige to attack Japan at present, especially as the Allies have massed large forces in the Near East. The pro-German Kokumin offers its readers the consoling thought that as Germany was the mediator between the Soviet and Finland, German influence will restrain the Soviet from attacking Japan.

The most significant feature of Premier Yonai's statement yesterday on Tokyo's promise to aid the formation of a new puppet regime in China, as far as the foreign powers are concerned, is its omissions.

Wang Ching-Wei's manifesto declared that foreign rights and interests in China would be respected and protected as the result of peace, and foreign capital with its technical resources was invited to participate in the reconstruction program.

Although Admiral Yonai was ostensibly replying to Wang, he entirely ignored this statement. The obviously intentional omission clearly implies that if foreign powers in the future desire protection or commercial opportunity, they must apply to the Wang regime.

The statement refrains from dispelling the obscurity which surrounds Japan's peace terms because though Wang knows and has accepted these conditions, their disclosures are reserved for the formal peace negotiations at some future date, and after Wang Ching-Wei's government is in the saddle. The main objective of the statement at this time is its announcement to the Chinese people that the Wang government can give them peace. One message warns them that Japan has replenished her strength and is ready to carry on the campaign until China's eyes are opened.

British Indian Secretary Shot As Assassin Kills Ex-Official

Lord Zetland, 2 Others Wounded At Crowded Meeting

By the Associated Press

London, March 13.—A retired British Indian administrator was shot and killed tonight and the secretary of state for India and two other Britons prominent in governing the turbulent subcontinent were wounded by an assassin.

At a crowded meeting to discuss Indian questions, a thick-set Indian, pulled out a pistol and fired shots which project the problem of independence for India's millions into a new limelight.

He aimed at men on the platform in Caxton Hall whose names have been knitted into Indian history of the last half a century.

Sir Michael O'Dwyer, former lieutenant governor of the Punjab, fell dead with two bullets in his chest. Lord Zetland, secretary for India, was grazed by a bullet. Sir Louis Dane and Lord Lamington, both former British administrators of Indian provinces, were wounded in the arm.

Police overpowered the assassin, and later an Indian named Mahomed Singh Azad was charged with murder in connection with the affair.

The shooting occurred at the close of a meeting of the East India Association, which "seeks the welfare of the people of India by lectures, discussions and social contact."

Sir Michael had just sat down after a speech of reminiscences that had kept the audience in good humor when the Indian fired four shots.

Sir Michael fell bleeding from a wound in his chest. He was attended by two physicians in the audience, but died almost immediately.

Lord Zetland, president of the association, fell by his chair.

O'Dwyer was lieutenant-governor of the Punjab when Brig. Gen. R. E. H. Dyers' troops on April 13, 1919, fired into a mob of 5,000 Indians at Amritsas, killing 400 and wounding 1,200. A firm believer in strong methods in India, O'Dwyer always defended Dyers' action.

O'Dwyer often was critical of Mohandas K. Gandhi, once describing him as "the biggest imposter that ever fooled the credulity of a people or frightened a cowardly government."

Lord Zetland, who has held the Indian portfolio in the British cabinet since 1935, recently appealed to Indian Nationalist leaders to show "a genuine will to succeed and a spirit of compromise" in their demands on the British. He was the subject of a personal oral attack by Gandhi only a week ago.

Gandhi blamed him for "closing the door to negotiation" in the issue of Indian independence.

Lord Lamington is a former governor of Bombay and Sir Louis Dane is a former lieutenant governor of the Punjab.

Nazi 'Secret Weapon' Believed By Expert to Be Oxygen Bomb

Copyright by New York Times

The "secret weapon" with which Chancellor Hitler has been threatening Great Britain and France, and in which the Allies profess to disbelieve, is probably an air mine filled with liquid oxygen and some form of carbon, the Senate Military Affairs Committee heard yesterday from Lester P. Barlow, specialist in aerial bombs.

According to Barlow, the Germans experimented with a bomb of this kind one day during the siege of Barcelona, but have not used the contrivance since. Senator Reynolds, who visited Barcelona shortly after this occasion and who is a member of the Military Affairs Committee, corroborated what the American specialist had to say about the destructive effects of such a missile.

The bomb, or mine, was probably made of commercial liquid oxygen, lampblack and silica sand, in Barlow's opinion. Such a bomb would be highly dangerous to carry in a plane, although its destructive effects would be great, he said.

After he had explained the chemical formulae and the mechanical contrivances by which he and George B. Holder, of the Air Reduction Corporation, of New York, claim to have conquered the question of safety and controlled detonation, some of the members of the committee asked him what patents he had taken out. When he replied that he had no patents, the committee decided to burn the stenographic notes of the hearing, for fear the information might leak to European powers and increase the horror of bombardment of civilians.

Barlow told newspapermen that his bomb, or mine, could be used for demolition purposes under the sea or on land. He said it is equipped with a mechanical control so that a pilot, for example, by merely pushing a lever can determine whether it will explode 40 feet above the ground, at impact, or 40 feet below the surface.

The upshot of his appearance yesterday was a decision to convoke a joint meeting of the Military Affairs and Naval Affairs Committees of the Senate and House for Monday, to which representatives of the War and Navy Departments will be invited. At this gathering will be discussed the demonstration Barlow proposes, at which he wants to bomb livestock in a field with bombs such as are now used, loaded with TNT, and then with his new bomb to show the greater destructive capacity of his invention.

tune of the world, the present trend to force makes insecure the independent existence of small nations in every continent and jeopardizes the rights of mankind to self government.

"The President now adds to his statement of December 1, 1939, by saying that the people of Finland, by their unexcelled valor and strong resistance in the face of overwhelming armed forces, have won the moral right to live in everlasting peace and independence in the land they have so bravely defended.

"The President reiterates that the people and government of Finland have again increased the respect and warm regard in which they are held by the people and Government of the United States, even though it is clear that by virtue of an attack by a neighbor many times stronger, they have been compelled to yield territory, and to accept a material weakening of their own future defense of their independence.

"The ending of this war does not yet clarify the inherent right of small nations to the maintenance of their inegrity against attack by superior force."

Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish Minister, shown the statement when he called on Secretary of State Hull yesterday, said:

"I personally appreciate it very highly as a new affirmation of the principles of justice and morality."

Secretary Hull again made it clear, at his press conference, that the United States had taken no part in arranging the peace talks. This country had not contemplated any mediation activity, he said. He read a dispatch from Laurence A. Steinhardt, American Ambassador at Moscow, denying reports that the Russian and Finnish negotiators had met in his embassy.

On Capitol Hill there was mixed reaction to the peace news.

North Countries May Form Defense Alliance

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, March 13.—Foreign Minister Gunther warned tonight that the "danger is not over" for Sweden and hinted at a possible defense alliance of the north countries as a result of Finland's peace with Russia.

Addressing a special meeting of the Swedish Parliament, Gunther said the question of strengthening cooperation among the northern countries should be submitted to "an unbiased examination."

At the same time he disclosed final Russian peace terms to Finland differed from those first submitted by Russia and which Sweden passed on to Finland.

The ceding of the eastern Finnish area about Salla's battlefields and the Kuusamo areas, and the proposed new railway connecting Russia with the Swedish border, he said, were "conditions that are of evident interest to us."

Gunther said Sweden acted only as an intermediary in the peace negotiations, and categorically denied that Germany had tried to exercise any influence on the Swedish government.

Sweden put no pressure on Finland to accept Russia's terms," he added.

"The northern countries should be prepared to direct their policy more purposely than before," Gunther said.

"As a result of Finland's altered frontiers our own position has become worse, viewed generally, than it was before the Russian-Finnish conflict."

Swedish Border Closer to Russia

Finland's cession of the Salla area brings the Russian frontier several miles closer to Sweden at the Finnish "wasp waist," where Red army troops almost succeeded in cutting the country in two in December.

The Norwegian newspaper, Dagbladet, at Oslo, today pointed out that "with a railway to be built to Kemi (on the Gulf of Bothnia) from the Russian Murmansk Line, the Soviet army can at any moment cut Finland in two and get to the Swedish border. The whole south of Finland will be defenseless by losing the Mannerheim Line fortifications and in the Russian occupation of Hanko."

The Swedish government newspaper Socialdemokraten also said today that only a "defense alliance in life and death" of the northern countries could give safety for the future, and warned:

"We do not believe in the durability of the new peace, and we do not believe in peace guarantees from a power which has dismembered and violated a free people."

Sweden must gather her strength for the future, with the example of Finland before her, Gunther said.

Swedish aid in Finland's war effort must now be turned to reconstruction of Finland, he continued.

"We have learned in a way we shall not forget how firmly the destinies of the northern peoples are bound together."

Sweden contributed to the Finns about 400,000,000 kronor (about $100,000,000) as loans and gifts, the foreign minister disclosed.

The committee called for 9,000 relief workers to help Finns transferred by the peace treaty find new homes and to help rebuild the industries lost to Russia.

Relief and Anxiety Mixed

Copenhagen, March 13 (AP).—Scandinavians asked themselves tonight if Finland, in submitting to a stern peace, was gambling on German help against further Soviet encroachments.

Only time will answer the question as to whether the Russo-Finnish peace involves some form of German guarantee for the new borders of Finland. And, Scandinavians said, if such a guarantee exists the realistic Finns must know that it will never be effective unless it is in Germany's interest.

Mixed relief and anxiety was Scandinavia's emotional reaction to the drastic terms of the treaty.

There was relief that Scandinavia, for the moment at least, has been saved from becoming a battleground of Allied-Russian-German war.

Tanner Tells Finns of Hard Task Ahead

Harsh Peace Better Than Ultimate Defeat By Superior Army

too everyday a word—but as men. The home front, too, has stood well all the terrorism which the total war waged on us has brought with it. Despite almost daily aerial bombardments, the spirit of the home front has remained magnificently confident and a model of efficiency has been maintained in its work.

All our efforts, meanwhile, have been hampered by one great deficiency. We are a small nation and can set against the enemy only a fraction of the forces which have been set rolling against us.

Because of this the same men have had to remain under fire the whole time. And even the pluckiest troops gradually become weary.

Gaps, too, are always caused in the ranks in war. Thus we were in sore need of reinforcements. But these have not been forthcoming.

A number of volunteers have hastened to our aid, but their number, compared to the assistance needed, has been very small.

"We have continued to send out apeals for help to overcome this deficiency. Our neighbors, the Scandinavian states, for whom it would have been easiest for geographical reasons to send troops to our aid, have not regarded themselves as being in a position to do so. . . .

"The Western Allies, after hesitating for sometime in the beginning, have announced their willingness to send to this country a fully equipped expeditionary force if this country so requests.

"This promise has been frequently repeated during the past weeks. On the latest occasion, a couple of days ago, the prime ministers of both countries, Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier, have given public assurances that their respective nations are ready, immediately on request to that effect by Finland, to stand by our side in the struggle with the aggressor.

Couldn't Reach Finland

"Our military command has carefully studied this scheme for our assistance. Its details have been exhaustively discussed. It has been found to be effective in every respect. Yet it contains one weak point. How are these reinforcements to reach this country? The geographical situation of Finland places difficulties in the way. So long as the Baltic Sea is closed, that sea route is out of the question. The route to Petsamo is long and difficult and it is, further, held by the enemy.

The only possible route lies across the Scandinavian countries, through Norway and Sweden. The governments of these two countries have been approached by the Finnish government on several occasions with a request for permission for Allied auxiliary forces to pass through their territory. A similar request has been made by the governments of the Allies. This permission, however, has been categorically refused on behalf of both countries concerned.

"Thus our country has been left to settle its relations with our powerful opponent alone . . . We have shown the path which small nations must take in the face of demands by dictator states. It has not been our fault that the democratic states have either been unwilling or unable to help us in this unequal struggle.

"All that can be said against us is that as a nation we are too small. In spite of the great success of our defense, we cannot alone carry this struggle to a victorious end.

"Terms Unexpectedly Severe"

As no help is forthcoming, the outcome of struggle is plain. If war continues, this country is in danger of being conquered and its population of being placed in a hopeless positio

When this eventuality became plain we began to explore the possibilities of peace . . . Contacts (with Russia) finally led to the departure of delegates of the Finnish government for Moscow on March 6 to open direct negiations with the Soviet government.

Meanwhile, however, hostilities have proceeded as intensely as ever. It is probably a unique phenomenon that delegates of a state proceeded in the midst of a fiercely raging war to an enemy capital to negotiate without a previous armistice.

The Soviet government, however, was not desirous of agreeing to an armistice before peace had been concluded.

During the negotiations in Moscow, delegates of the Soviet Union presented their terms for peace.

These terms are unexpectedly severe compared with what the enemy has so far succeeded in achieving by war. They also greatly exceed the demands presented by the Soviet government last autumn in the name of the increased security of Leningrad.

Our delegates have attempted to secure alleviation of these terms, but in vain.

In spite of the severity of the terms the government has regarded assent to them as being in the national interest.

'No Hope of Better Terms'

As we have no hope of securing better terms by continuing the war it has been preferred to agree to the present terms rather than continue a hopeless war.

Finland having consented, the treaty of peace was signed last night and at the same time it was agreed that hostilities should cease today.

Our eastern frontier will run approximately where it was fixed at the peace of Uusikaupunki in 1721. Cape Hanko will be ceded. Similarly our territory on the Rybachi peninsula in Petsamo.

On the other hand no political demands have been presented to us. The Soviet Union does not intend to interfere in either our domestic or our foreign policy. That would indeed have been a demand which we could not have accepted.

Radical Regime Ruined

Further, the right of this country to self-determination remains inviolable. The Kuusinen 'government' to which the future fate of this country was to have been entrusted, according to the scheme drawn up at the beginning of the war, has been thrust aside.

As will appear from these preliminary reports . . . peace imposes a heavy burden on this country. Only with great hesitation has the government consented to it.

The decision was all the more difficult to reach in that no one could foresee what the near future would bring.

In this case it will become evident only at a later stage, as is the case of all great political decisions, whether the decision was right or wrong.

"Peace the Wisest Course"

The government meanwhile has had to shoulder the responsibility. In the government's opinion, the wisest course was to conclude peace while our resistance was still unbroken.

Peace has thus returned to this country. But what a peace!

Henceforth the nation will continue its existence in a state of mutilation. Its old frontiers have been altered. Areas of vital importance have had to be surrendered, including important industrial and agricultural areas.

The population of ceded areas will have to seek new dwelling places.

Our future possibilities for defense are weakened. Nevertheless, in the government's opinion, peace was better than to go on with an uncertain war.

With the restoration of peace we shall return to a more normal existence, in the measure in which the continuing war between the great powers allows.

In this connection, new and great tasks in abundance will be imposed on us.

We must begin to remedy the wounds struck by war.

New work of construction must be begun.

In all this, I am convinced we shall succeed . . .

Our country has been devastated before this, during the course of its history. Its population has once been reduced by nearly half. Even from such depths we have ascended again.

Finland will become a vigorous nation and her people prosper as before. We have land in abundance. Our opportunities for fruitful work are boundless. And our army is still whole.

It can keep watch that our peace will not be disturbed in the future.

Unanimity Is Asked

One thing, however, is essential. The unanimity which war brought us we shall, it is to be hoped, preserve.

It was created by outside pressure. So long as European affairs are in their present state of confusion, the danger of new complications is constantly present.

Because of this, we must continue to hold together, united and therefore strong . . .

We must forget the past and look to the future. If we succeed in this, it will be a promise of regeneration for Finland, after the blow we have endured.

Helsinki Stays Blacked Out

Helsinki, March 13 (AP).—Peace with Russia brought no lifting of Helsinki's blackout restrictions tonight.

Street lights were a mere flicker in the blackness. Restrictions on the sale of alcoholic beverages remained in force.

Air raid wardens patrolled their beats and civilian guards assigned to bomb shelters were at their posts.

'The West Is Paid,' Mannerheim Says

World War debtors, always has kept up its payments.)

"Our fate is hard now that we are compelled to give up to an alien race, a race with a life philosophy and moral values different from ours, the ground which for centuries we have cultivated in labor and sweat," his message said

"Yet we must put our shoulders to the wheel in order that we may prepare on the soil left to us a home for those rendered homeless and an improved livelihood for all, and as before we must be ready to defend our diminished fatherland with the same resolution and same fire with which we defended our undivided fatherland."

Referring to the "exacting peace which has ceded to Russia nearly every battlefield on which you have shed your blood on behalf of everything we hold dear and sacred," Mannerheim told his soldiers:

"You did not want war. You asked peace, work and progress; but you were forced into a struggle in which you have done great deeds, deeds which will shine for centuries in the pages of history.

"More than 15,000 of you who took the field will never again see your homes, and how many those who have lost forever their ability to work!

"But you have also dealt hard blows, and if 200,000 of our enemies now lie on the snow drifts gazing with broken eyes at our starry sky, the fault is not yours. You did not hate them or wish them evil; you merely followed the stern law of war, kill or be killed."

Attacks Sweden, Norway

Help from the Western powers, said the veteran who saved Finland from Bolshevik domination in 1919, did not arrive in time because Sweden and Norway were "looking after their own houses."

"The army stands undefeated against an enemy which, in spite of colossal losses, constantly grew in numbers," Mannerheim said in his farewell message.

"The Finnish soldiers were exposed to an enormous physical and psychological strain, because it was impossible to provide them with relief."

In spite of his ire at Finland's Scandinavian neighbors, Mannerheim gallantly thanked Sweden and Norway, as well as Britain and France, for sending arms and planes, "without which the Finns could not possibly have held out for so long."

But, he added sadly, "the help we hoped for never was forthcoming."

critical attitude leveled at Americs in 1916. There is a general feeling that America is making great fortunes out of the war, that she is again playing the role of Shylock.

This attitude is spreading among average people, but even among well informed the criticism of Americans is becoming acrimonious. One important official said:

"We don't mind your not coming into the war, but we do mind your misunderstanding our motives for fighting."

It's all part of the desperate war of nerves that is intensified by the grim knowledge that England is fighting for its life. There is not one in a hundred but what has set his jaw determined to win no matter what the cost or time.

For the present, only an almost complete surrender by Hitler would induce England to quit. The attitude of France is much the same.

If President Roosevelt's third-term decision rests on Welles' reports regarding prospects for an early peace, the President can make his decision immediately.

There will be no peace until next winter at the earliest—not even if this "armistice" before real fighting should continue. Certainly, if bitter fighting breaks out this spring and summer, peace will be further removed.

U. S. Finn Aid Agencies Plan To Press Drive

Hoover Cables Kallio America Will Continue 'To Do Its Utmost'

By the Associated Press

New York, March 13.—Various organizations formed in the United States to extend relief to Finland planned today to carry on their activities despite the cessation of Russian-Finnish hostilities.

Former President Hoover cabled Finland's President Kyosti Kallio assurance that the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc., would "continue to do its utmost in service to the Finnish people." His message was in response to a cabled appeal from Kallio that American help for Finland be continued.

In a statement, Hoover declared "we ought to give this encouragement to the Finnish people in this time of trial.

"The terms imposed on Finland mark another sad day for civilization. The Finns have made an heroic defense that will live for all time. But the odds were insuperable."

The fund, he explained, would continue its work to "meet the civilian emergencies for which it was created. There will be thousands more Finnish refugees from the Russian acquired territory for whom new homes must be found . . . many destitute who need to be carried over . . ."

(About 450,000 persons will be resettled from the ceded Karelian Isthmus and the area north of Lake Ladoga, a Hensinki dispatch estimated. Many of these, including the 70,000 residents of Viipuri, have already been removed to the interior of Finland, but the temporary refugee facilities of wartime must now be developed into permanent homes.

Gen. John F. O'Ryan, national chairman of Fighting Funds for Finland, Inc., announced his organization also would continue, at least temporarily.

"We do not know whether representatives of Finland who dealt with the Russian authorities were vested with full power to negotiate terms or principles only," he said. "We do not know what the attitude of the Finnish government may be in relation to confirmation of terms . . ."

Likewise, an American medical unit of nurses and surgeons headed by Dr. Dwight B. Fishwick, planned to sail for Finland, March 22.

At the Finnish consulate in New York, it was disclosed that the Finnish Red Cross needed $200,000 and donations of clothing and supplies to care for wounded Finnish soldiers and 600,000 civilians, including 150,000 children, from evacuated areas.

greatest defeat to Great Britain in a century.

Not only did the Soviet gain greatly in territorial and military advantage by its treaty with Finland, but also secured economic gains of great significance.

Observers were impressed by the Soviet's gain of extensive transit rights through the Petsamo district to Norway, and the proposed joint Russian-Finnish construction of a railway directly linking the Russian Murmansk line with Sweden.

These communications, it was pointed out, may give Russia her most important economic corridor to Scandinavia and the Atlantic.

Other observers noted that copper mines near Ladoga fall to the Soviet Union. While the nickel mines in the Petsamo area remain Finnish, the Soviet is expected to make a successful bid for part of the nickel exports.

Strategically, observers were agreed, Russia's position is greatly improved.

The distance from Leningrad to the frontier has been increased from 20 to 90 miles, while distance from the Murmansk railway, at Kandalaksha, to the frontier has been increased from 40 to 75 miles.

Russia's peace in Finland capped a string of successes in the last six months, including acquisition of western Poland, pacts which permitted Russian bases in Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, commercial agreements with Bulgaria and Iran, considerable improvement of relations with Japan, and the newfound Soviet-German friendship.

The Soviet official elation was echoed in nationwide mass meetings at which speakers referred in glowing terms to the peace conditions and described them as expressing the will of 183,000,000 Soviet citizens.

Mile-long queues of Muscovites lined up for newspapers and grabbed them up as fast as they appeared.

Admittedly, the price Russia paid in soldiers slain was steep, but it was pointed out that she is a big and rich country and well able to pay for her gains.

On the credit side of the ledger, Russians felt they had achieved once and for all "security" for Leningrad from any attack by any power by land or sea over Finnish soil or waters.

by creation of three new army corps, 20 new divisions and 20 additional regiments of divisional artillery. He said army personnel had been increased by recruiting 1,000 officers, 1,500 subalterns and 6,500 noncommissioned officers.

In the past year 30,000 reserve officers received fresh training and 18,000 specialists, tank and truck drivers, were recruited.

Details of naval expansion were not given.

Italians expressing government views accepted Finland's peace with Russia as inevitable. While they admired the Finns' "heroic resistance," they said Helsinki acted wisely, since Finland never had a chance against Russia's numerical superiority.

Il Giornale d'Italia, like other papers, said the "100 days war" ended at the "right time" with honor for the Finns. Some commentators termed the peace a diplomatic success for Germany and the Scandinavian countries. All agreed Russia had turned the Baltic sea into a Russian lake.

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano criticized the settlement as an act of violence, "a so-called peace which does not dishonor Finland but offends the European conscience, if it is still conscious of justice."

The Vatican organ feared Russia would destroy the remainder of Finnish independence as Germany ended Czechoslovakia's, and asserted the Finns had "destroyed the myth of Russia's power."

Rome trade circles understood that during an experimental period in January and February Germany had sent a monthly average of 500,000 tons of coal to Italy, one-half of Italy's needs.

On the basis of this test Italians are hopeful of obtaining 750,000 tons a month by rail for a total of 9,000,000 tons a year.

This would leave 3,000,000 tons, particularly kinds used in the steel industry, to be obtained elsewhere.

An effort to cover most of this shortage from Britain, which has been supplying 2,000,000 tons a year, is expected to be made in renewed trade negotiations with Britain.

Rumanian Pact Discussed

Bucharest, March 13 (AP).—Plans for a nonaggression pact between Russia and Rumania are under discussion in Berlin, it was reported tonight. Officials refused comment, but it was learned on high authority that military commission composed of high Rumanian army officers now is in Berlin.

For more than a week government officials here have denied reports that a Russian delegation was coming to discuss a nonaggression pact.

These reports came at a time when much of Rumania is nervous over the possibility that the end of the Finnish-Russian war may jeopardize the safety of this country.

The German interest in a Russian-Rumanian nonaggression pact was described in well-informed circles as thoroughly consistent with Germany's latest diplomatic campaign.

within three days, Tanner said this might take two weeks.

After the hush of the armistice at 11 a. m., (4 a. m. Eastern Standard Time), it became known that some of the fiercest fighting of the war took place in the final hours before peace.

[The Russian army command, in its final war communique, claimed Viipuri, already ceded to the U. S. S. R. in the peace treaty, had been captured by Red army troops at 7 a. m. (Leningrad time), after a two-hour battle.]

When the fighting ceased suddenly, the men who a few minutes before had been in the midst of battle were stunned by the quiet.

In the 7½ hours between the signing of the peace treaty and the armistice the Russians and Finns were attacking and counterattacking on three fronts and air forces of both sides were active. The Finnish aviators, however, returned to their bases an hour before the armistice. The Russians bombed two towns, wounding three civilians.

There are tremendous physical problems for the Finns as a result of the treaty which takes historic Viipuri and the whole Karelian Isthmus into the Soviet Union; makes a Russian lake of Ladoga, Europe's greatest; leases Gibraltar-like Hanko to Russia for a naval and military base and provides Russia with easy transit across Finland to Norway and Sweden.

A total of 450,000 evacuated residents from the isthmus and Ladoga areas must be resettled and provided for.

Cession of territory taken by Russia and the withdrawal of Finnish troops will start March 15 and end on April 10.

Hanko must be handed over within ten days.

Tanner, however, said Finland intended to make every preparation of her own to protect her new borders.

Asked if she would be permitted to fortify these borders under the peace treaty, he asked: "Who is going to stop us?"

"Our military commanders say all borders are defensible," he added.

The nickle mines of the north, he asserted, remain in Finnish hands.

After Tanner, in his broadcast, had given the nation the first Finnish word of the capitulation, flags on all Finnish buildings were lowered to half staff.

Commons Fights Over Finns

of all peoples."

After Chamberlain sat down, Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war secretary, rose and declared that the Finns had repeatedly asked for assistance not only material but in men, and accused the government of pleading "as an excuse for inaction, a pure technicality."

Referring to the "magnitude and far-reaching effects" of the Finnish defeat, Hore-Belisha asked that the House be allowed in the near future an opportunity to discuss the government's "whole conduct of the war."

Denies Men Were Asked

This attack by a former member of the cabinet brought Chamberlain to his feet. He said it was not correct that repeated requests for men were made by the Finnish government. "The Finnish government," he said, "made repeated requests for material and every one of those requests was answered."

He denied under Hore-Belisha's probing that any "requests for men had been made by the Finnish government."

Firmly the prime minister insisted "it always was understood that it was for the Finnish government to decide upon the course of action."

The former war secretary, open advocate of outright military aid to Finland, then asked whether 50,000 French and still more British troops had been ready to fight in Finland—as Premier Daladier told the French Chamber of Deputies yesterday.

Chamberlain Evades Issue

Chamberlain blandly replied that he had "endeavored to obtain accurate accounts" of Daladier's speech, but could not comment until such an account was received.

In the House of Lords a private session to discuss Finland was proposed by Lord Balfour, but Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax squelched the request.

Nor was Hore-Beslisha the only prominent member of the House to criticize the government policy. David Lloyd George, former premier, who missed the first part of the squabble, interrupted his speech on the nation's food problems later in the evening to complain about the government's conduct of the war.

"In my heart," said Britain's last wartime premier, "I am glad of the news today, because I was afraid we were getting so deep in the mire that we could not extract ourselves."

"Too Late" With Everything

"It is the old trouble—too late. Too late with Czecho-Slovakia, too late with Poland, certainly too late with Finland. It is always too late or too little or both and that is the road to disaster."

These attacks by no means won the sympathy of the House, but nevertheless they illustrate the general uneasiness which pervaded Whitehall today.

There are a lot of people who believe the Finns did the Allies a great favor by getting them out of "another Gallipoli," but at the same time there are many others, like Hore-Belisha, who believe that the British hesitancy at sending troops to Finland might force the Allies eventually to go through the slaughter of a frontal attack across the Siegfried Line.

British Plans Upset

Finland's acceptance of Soviet terms was believed to have upset Britain's calculations. Finland's military position appears to have been worse than was realized here, as it had been expected the Finns would be able to resist the invaders until June.

Washington Industries:

By Edward Ryan

Washington's ornamental iron industry, begun by the old-time blacksmith, has become a modern machine-powered jack of all metals with an estimated $1,500,000 annual revenue. This definition would hold for the dozen or more ironworks in the District taken together, would collapse for any one of them singly.

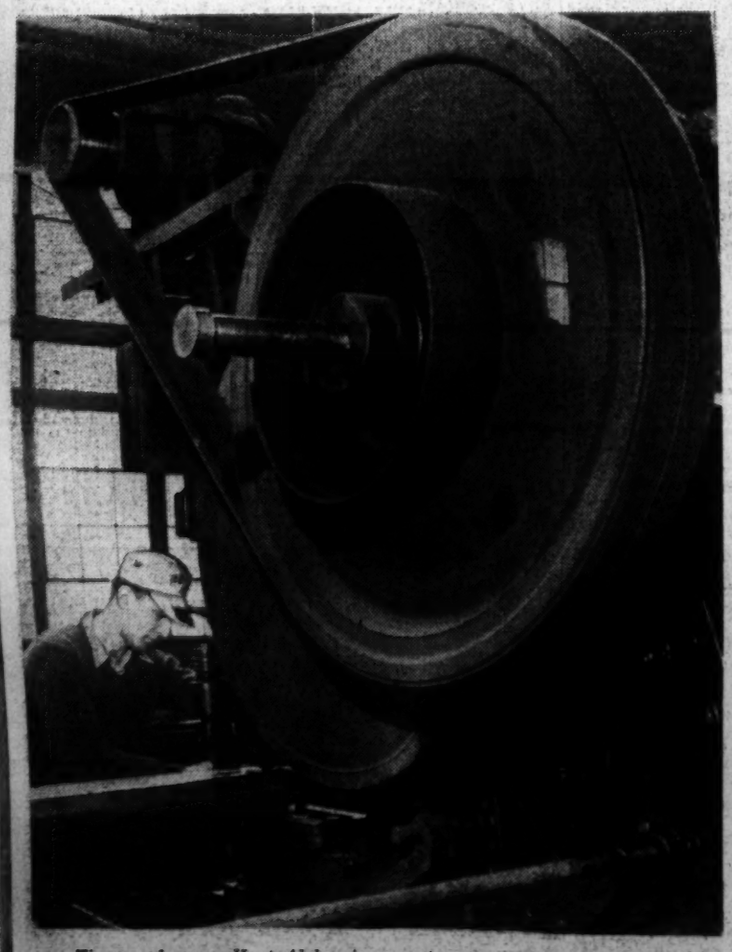
Iron and the men who shape it have been a part of Potomac River history since the earliest days. There was a time when even nails were counted so valuable that if a man had any extra ones around the house he willed them to his favorite son or best friend. The first settlers bid in the English market for blacksmiths. Older men in the local iron industry now recall a time when the ornamental iron works was a blacksmith shop.

Unlike other industries, ornamental iron has left room for the blacksmiths and their forges beside the modern machines. The smith's tools are the same, hammer and anvil, and the ring of them is the same. His forge is likely to be better than in the old days, fanned with a machine blower instead of with hand-operated bellows.

The blacksmith holds an important place in the industry simply because he is there, when you don't expect to find him. His forge will occupy one tiny corner of a vast vaulted shed, the length of it filled with machines.

At one of the forges was a 57-year-old Russian blacksmith, who had spent some 30 years at his trade around Pennsylvania mines. He told, with a broad grin, and hesitating English, how he used to go deep into the mines to shoe horses, and in those days he was "strong as a mule."

Now, he suggested, he may be headed for the poorhouse. He worked steadily, heating the end of an iron rod white hot, then hammering it over to make a loop. Once, while he fed the iron to the fire, he remarked, "now they have a machine for everything."



The punch press Kurt Aleker is operating is capable of cutting a 1-inch cube of iron from a cold plate

Post Staff Photos—Del Vecchio.

Welder Krenkel, wields his flaming electric arc torch from behind a protective mask which permits him to watch the blue glare

From mechanic to executive, this note on the passing of the old ways is repeated.

A philosopher-manufacturer in Southeast Washington advised:

"Don't write about the iron industry. It's dying. Go out and write about unemployment."

He rummaged a while in the lower shelves of an ancient filing case and brought out volumes of an old German trade journal published by ornamental iron workers there around the turn of the century. He turned the pages slowly, at last flattened them back and pointed.

"There," he said. "That was ornamental iron."

His illustration was an ornate gate, forged in bronze and iron, and picturing a "war" between the two metals. It showed iron dragons fighting with great bronze snakes for possession of an anvil, and every inch of the work, he said, had been shaped by hand.

He said that he had seen the gate and had worked in the Berlin factory where it was made. "There was ornamental iron," he said again. "Now all they want is a few straight bars welded together."

A little later he walked out through the plant down an aisle between power lathes and winding drive belts to the foundry pit. His men had been casting stove grates, and steam was rising from the hot molding sand. "I like the way the sand smells," he remarked.

'Jack of All Metals'

In a plant across the city, a stocky, neatly dressed manager had another description for ornamental iron than a "dying industry."

"This is an exciting business," he said. "Something new every day and never the same thing twice."

Each order for ornamental iron or other metal, he pointed out, goes first into detailed drawings. The builder's drawing, usually half scale, is enlarged to a full scale guide for the workmen, and every twist and turn is caught in the metal by skilled mechanics. Among the machines they have to help in the job are punch presses, capable of biting out a one-inch cube of iron from a cold plate, huge power-driven shears, forms for shaping the iron cold, and along with these the flaming acetylene torch and searing electric arc to join metals.

What part the ornamental iron industry has had in buliding Washington is seen throughout the city, in graceful stair railings, grilles for door and window, fancy grates and iron fences, and in things more useful than ornamental, like fire escapes and elevator doors.

One of the biggest ornamental iron jobs in local building history was the 6-mile iron fence around the Soldiers' Home, put up before the war at a cost of some $90,000. There are no jobs like that around now, although last year, officials of the industry say, was relatively good.

Main problem the industry has been facing is the changing patterns of architecture, with declining demand for iron work, and more demand for other metals for ornament, for aluminum and bronze and new alloys. With this demand, the industry is branching out to work these metals. In a single plant, now, you can find the blacksmith with his anvil, the iron workers driving their power presses, the masked welder bent over the blue glare of the electric arc, the aluminum worker shaping his metal with rubber hammer.

These workers, with their executives, in 1937 added up to more than 250 employes and a $405,000 pay roll.

They also Serve who only Stand and Wait

IN THE WEEK BEFORE NEW YEAR'S, 1940, Istanbul was quiet as Wall Street on a Sunday.

Robert Canuti, the AP's English-educated Turkish correspondent, hadn't had a first-class story for almost three months—not since the Turko-British treaty handed the Kremlin a short and snappy answer.

▶ But while man was dozing, Nature woke. Beneath the surface of ancient Asia Minor, subterranean ledges lost their age-long balance, slipped and skidded sideways.

The first totals of homeless, dead, and injured—usually exaggerated in such disasters—were not exaggerated this time. Pictures that came by "slow camel" added to the terrible tale. It was the biggest earthquake story since Yokohama.

And Robert Canuti, his months of waiting ended, had it on the wires to the western world before it was known in the streets of Istanbul. At once, the machinery of international relief began to whir, and help was on the way.

▶ Most people think of Press Association men as daring young acrobats of the newspaper world, always somersaulting from one hot story to another... now in Tokio, next in Singapore—now in Bucharest, soon at Brussels.

But the complete, the almost miraculous, world-coverage of the great Press Services comes from men who mostly stand and wait. Correspondents like Robert Canuti in the quieter capitals—and the thousands of "stringers," in the world's little towns and villages, so-called because they paste their infrequent dispatches into a string and measure their payment by the inch.

Men like these form the nerve ends of the wire services—indispensable divisions of journalism's army of 300,000 men.

▶ The development of these world-wide Press Services, accurate, unbiased, and unsubsidized, is an American achievement. It is an outstanding example of American organizing genius—and it has all happened within the lifetime of most news-readers now living. More than that, the Press Services are the standard bearers, throughout the world, of the 20th century American tradition of accuracy and fair play in news-reporting. Something new under the sun.

▶ It wasn't until the 1890s that the dream of the modern Associated Press began to take form. A few courageous pioneers—Victor Lawson, Frank B. Noyes, Melville Stone, and Adolph Ochs—worked zealously for it, and in time press associations began pointing eager fingers at the map of the world and putting new correspondents wherever a fat dot showed an important city.

By the time an emperor with a withered arm unleashed the hounds of war in 1914, U. S. Press Services had spun their webs around the globe. AP's now seasoned network was being kept on its mettle by a lusty young competitor, an independent service called United Press, fathered in 1907 by E. W. Scripps.

Due chiefly to the vision of these pioneers, the U. S., in less than half a century, has shed its news provincialism. Today... let a flood sweep down the Yangtze, a strike begin in Melbourne, a regiment revolt in Addis Ababa, and in a matter of minutes or hours the teletypes in the U. S. begin to chatter.

▶ FLASH—calls the foreign cable, and begins gasping out its own curt, staccato language... SMORNING FRENCH CRUISER AIR-BOMBED IN ENGLISH CHANNEL. "Flash," calls the New York operator. "French cruiser bombed." A rewrite man works frantically, and soon the fingers of another operator start the electric current flowing. Operators in Philadelphia, Chicago, and almost a score of other U. S. cities stand up crying "Flash." In a few seconds, every cranny of the U. S. will have the news.

From 50,000 news sources all over the globe, this river of news flows day and night. For while America sleeps, one half the world is wide-awake, busy getting into and out of trouble, busy making that vivid, perishable stuff called news.

▶ To every self-respecting newspaper, Press Association news is the breath of life. A paper pays for as much of it as it can afford and use. A country weekly can have as little as $18 worth a week, a metropolitan daily as much as $2,500. But whether a paper gets "pony" or multiple wire service, it counts its Press Association service as perhaps its most valuable asset.

▶ Press Association news is just as indispensable to The Weekly Newsmagazine as to a daily newspaper. To be sure, TIME has its own special correspondents, too—its own force of 500 newsscouts—its own check-and-query system.

But the stories from the daring acrobats and the quiet watchers of the Press Associations supply a basic pattern of the world's news... the vital pattern, which in the Newsmagazine becomes the continuing narrative history of our times, followed every week by 700,000 cover-to-cover readers.

This is one of a series of advertisements in which the Editors of TIME hope to give all the readers of this newspaper a clearer picture of the world of news-gathering, news-writing, and news-reading—and the part TIME plays in helping you to grasp, measure, and use the history of your lifetime while you live the story of your life.

The ABCB Inquiry

For several weeks Representative Eberharter's committee has listened to testimony from numerous witnesses concerning the control of liquor in the District. Reports that sensational findings were about to be disclosed have enlivened the hearings on several occasions. Yet no such testimony has been heard. Probably the most interesting fact turned up is that members of Congress sometimes attempt to bring pressure upon the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

According to Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the ABCB, the number of cases before that board in which members of Congress have used their influence has been very small. But if only one Congressman had attempted to bring pressure upon the board, that fact would be worthy of public attention. Preprohibition experience has led to very positive conclusions that no tie-up between the liquor business and politics can be tolerated. So the use of political influence to secure licenses or other privileges from liquor control boards cannot be too vigorously condemned.

Aside from this general policy, interference by individual Congressmen in the affairs of the District tends to emphasize the difficulties under which the local government operates. When Senators and Representatives who hold the city's purse strings seek special privileges from District boards, it becomes virtually impossible for them to operate with complete impartiality. If the ABCB hearings have demonstrated anything, then, it is the need for a larger degree of independence for the local government, including the liquor board.

Certainly the committee has not demonstrated any need for sweeping change in the District's system of liquor control. To show that any basic adjustments are desirable, a far more penetrating investigation would be required. And there seems to be little prospect that such an inquiry would be more fruitful than the hearings before Mr. Eberharter have been.

Suitable For What?

So secretive has Sumner Welles been about his conversations with the political leaders of Europe that reporters have had to think up the most devious questions in their attempts to extract from the diplomat more than a terse "No comment." Many of these questions bear a startling resemblance to those put to President Roosevelt to trick him into revealing his attitude toward a third term. But Mr. Welles has become fully as adept as the President in blandly parrying reporters' queries.

One newspaperman, for instance, asked Mr. Welles if he would like to comment on the report that his face looked gloomier than usual after his visit with Hitler. "No sir," the Undersecretary of State replied, "like you, one of my greatest defects is that I cannot see my own face."

Mr. Welles later gave reporters and columnists a much more vital clue on which to speculate. We refer, of course, to the fact that he took time off in London to order six suits from his West End tailor. Now this might easily mean that our roving diplomat has decided there will be a long war and is laying in a supply of suits certain to last out the conflict. Or does such an extravagant outlay indicate that Mr. Welles optimistically hopes for early peace and prosperity?

There will probably be some who will interpret this purchase as a sure sign that Mr. Welles has sold out to the British. To substantiate that theory they could point to the article in the London Evening News which said of our hero that "he wears his perfectly cut blue suit like an Englishman, talks like an Englishman, with no trace of an American accent, and behaves as an Englishman would like to behave." The Evening News had no comment on whether or not Mr. Welles' face looked more British than usual after his interview with the King.

However that may be, there is some comfort in knowing that the superdiplomatic Mr. Welles has slipped up at last. Six suits obviously mean that there will or will not be peace on the continent this spring. And everyone can take his choice.

Aftermath

The war within the war has ended. The peace terms accepted by Finland have ended the ever-present possibility that the hostilities between these two nations would become merged in the larger struggle.

The "turning point affecting far more than the fate of Finland alone," as we defined it in these columns last Saturday, has thus been reached. Even before ratification of the Moscow peace treaty the question of its effect on the major belligerents becomes paramount. Will the Russo-Finnish peace lead toward negotiations for a settlement between Germany and the Allies, or will it merely serve to protract and intensify the continuing war?

At the moment none, not even the leaders in the belligerent nations, could answer this crucial question with any assurance. But there is certain indisputable evidence the sum of which will of necessity play a part in determining their decisions.

Foremost in this evidence is the indication that Nazi Germany is the real victor in the Finnish war. Russia, of course, wrote the terms of settlement, at Finland's expense, but the Russian triumph is by no means unalloyed. The advantages gained by Germany, on the other hand, are far less subject to discount.

By its inability to conquer Finland in three and one-half months of fighting, the Russian army has suffered a painful deflation of prestige. Moscow's announced intention of replacing the Finnish government with a puppet Communist regime has had to be dropped. The likelihood of a later renewal of aggression seems the less because Russia has learned a lesson, both as to Finnish bravery and skill and as to her own deficiencies of organization. In spite of territorial losses, Finland is safer because she fought.

President Roosevelt said yesterday that "by their unexcelled valor" the Finnish people "have won the moral right to live in everlasting peace and independence in the land they have so bravely defended." They had that moral right already. What they have really won is the respect of an unscrupulous aggressor who now realizes that Finland is one small nation which has not merely the right but also the will to defend itself.

So the Russian Bear will, for a time at least, sit back and nurse his wounds. And in that lies a part of Germany's gain. The Russo-Finnish war has demonstrated that the Reich has little to fear from Russia. In the uneasy partnership between Hitler and Stalin the balance of power has clearly shifted to the former. At Finland's expense Russia has improved the sea defenses of Leningrad. But Finland has demonstrated, and Germany has unquestionably noted, how easily Leningrad could be taken, by a large and competent army, in a land attack from the rear.

Dominance in the Russo-German alliance, which may be translated into terms of a steady flow of Russian materials to Germany, is one gain which Hitler can chalk up as a result of the peace in Finland. But there are other assets from the Nazi viewpoint. All risk of having to form a front in Scandinavia is eliminated. Norwegian and Swedish neutrality is confirmed, and confirmed in a way which means a strengthened German influence in these countries. Finland, with no present cause to love Russia or admire the democracies, will now be particularly subject to attraction into the German orbit.

In the Balkan as well as the Scandinavian countries the effect of the Finnish peace will be pronounced. Rumania naturally fears Russia and leans toward the Allies. But with the case of Finland before their eyes the Rumanians are now likely to put an unwilling trust in Germany, whose troops are close at hand. And at a price, payable primarily in oil, the Germans will doubtless protect Rumania. In Jugoslavia, Bulgaria and even Turkey the diplomatic repercussions will also be pronounced.

All these factors, plus the strengthening effect of the turn of events on German morale, will now be cause for the most serious reflection in London and Paris. That reflection may lead to sharp intensification of the Allied war effort. It may lead to a more receptive attitude toward any peace suggestion which the Pope or any other mediator might decide to make.

But whichever way the road now turns it is clear that the small nations are very far from achieving what President Roosevelt yesterday somewhat fatuously called their "inherent right" to a free and secure existence.

Planning For Health

Dr. Seckinger's request for construction of a 250-bed convalescent home to supplement Gallinger Municipal Hospital is in line with the most enlightened and most economical methods of caring for indigent patients. Gallinger is usually overcrowded because many patients must be kept there after their need for hospital care has passed. That is costly to taxpayers and discouraging to patients.

The type of convalescent home advocated by the assistant health officer could be operated at much lower costs per patient than those which prevail in the hospital. Still more important, it would prevent the herding of convalescent patients together with epileptics, feebleminded persons and psychotics at Blue Plains. That fact alone underlines the value of the plan.

It is to be hoped that the proposed convalescent home will be only a first step toward modernizing the health services available to low-income families of Washington. Under present conditions many patients undergo a long period of hospitalization because less costly preventive measures are not available. One woman was recently sent back to Gallinger because malnutrition, resulting from the inadequacies of the city's relief system, brought a recurrence of her previous ailment. Her experience is by no means uncommon.

The Health Department has also pointed out to the Commissioners the need for a clinic at Gallinger to treat patients who do not need institutional care. Medical service in the homes of the poor who cannot go to clinics is advocated as another means of reducing the burden on Gallinger. All these services would cost money, but in the end they would doubtless pay dividends in better public health and in reduction of the number of patients who must be given costly hospital treatment.

Encouraging Crime

Washington's present concern over crime gives the case of Aldo Pieri a very pointed interest. This young man has been arrested and charged with grand larceny. The crime of which he is accused was committed 18 days after he had pleaded guilty before Judge Peyton Gordon to robbery and three violations of the narcotics law. For nearly three weeks after he had pleaded guilty to serious crimes he was at liberty on bond.

Dr. James A. Nolan, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, has good reason to use sharp language in denouncing a system which invites known criminals to go out and commit fresh depredations. It must be remembered that Pieri has not been convicted of the grand larceny charge. But it is quite obvious that, by releasing on bond men who have pleaded guilty or have been convicted of serious crimes, the Court puts them under temptation, as Dr. Nolan says, "to go out and plunder some more."

Such practices actually tend to encourage crime. For a man free on bond, who has reason to suppose that he may soon be behind the bars, is under pressure to obtain money in the only way open to him to pay his attorney fees and living expenses. There seems to be no excuse for failure to remand the defendants in such cases to jail.

This abuse of bail-bonding practice calls attention to the fact that the Criminal Justice Association made a detailed study of the release of defendants on bond two years ago. Its findings led to the appointment of a committee by the District Court to study the situation and suggest reforms. That committee brought in an excellent set of recommendations. Its proposals were examined by the Court, but no action has been taken.

So bonding is still a haphazard and chaotic procedure in the District Court. That tribunal has no record of how many bonds are written or forfeited. It prescribes no limit to the amount of bonds any individual bondsman may write. In both of these respects the District Court lags behind the Police Court, which modernized its bonding practices some time ago. This lack of records in the District Court makes it impossible to keep a close check upon bondsmen. It even appears that a bondsman in default on a forfeited bond in the Police Court can continue to bond defendants in the District Court.

Such slipshod methods are utterly out of keeping with the requirements for effective enforcement of the law. In addition to correcting the haphazard procedure revealed by the Pieri case, the District should obviously bring its bonding system into line with the constructive recommendation already before it.

Animal Offenders

When a dog was recently cited before the courts on the charge of manslaughter, the case was considered rather unique. But in a book called "Petite Chronique de Bale" we read of a profligate rooster accused of the crime of laying an egg. The rooster was tried, convicted and burned publicly, along with the egg, as a lesson to others.

That was in 1474. A little earlier, in 1389, in Dijon, France, a horse was found guilty of premeditating the death of a man. At Canroy (also France) a bull was condemned for a similar offense. In this case an appeal was taken. But the original sentence was sustained.

The legend of St. Patrick driving serpents out of Ireland by public ban is familiar and timely. Less well known is the story that St. Bernard denounced fleas canonically and that a bishop once excommunicated sparrows.

Legal proceedings were instituted against leeches in the Lake of Geneva by the Bishop of Lausanne; against mosquitoes in the Electorate of Mayence. The judge before whom the mosquitoes were cited granted them counsel because of their youth and diminutiveness. The humane instinct on the bench can perhaps be carried too far.

Breeders Of Crime

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Recently, the writer read a suggestion that Washington should have 500 new policemen. This would mean over a million dollars in salaries. Of course, there is no such possibility.

Why not begin to try to reduce the winter crime waves by getting at the causes? Let's admit that most of the criminals are not native Washingtonians. They are Americans nevertheless, many of whom have, like the "Joads" migrated here to the National Capital from the States where are to be found most of the Nation's one-third ill housed, ill fed, ill clothed.

These people come here hoping for jobs or better living just as the one or two hundred thousand luckier job holders have done. Many of these Government workers would probably have been reliefers back home.

As WPA breaks down, and as long as we cannot solve the problem of creating more jobs by reducing hours and spreading work to more people, we are going to have hoards of unemployed men and boys loose on the community, or temporarily wards at our institutions for correction or protection.

Note the roving gangs of young men during the late hours at night in the nickelodeon parlors, pool rooms and any lighted, heated beer garden until closing time, when they crowd back into the congested, dark, cold sleeping dens in our older city areas. Is it any wonder some of these rovers turn into marauders?

Prevention of much of the crime in any modern city lies in the eradication of the evils that breed crime. The costs for extra police, bigger jails, larger hospitals might better be spent, for suitable houses after elimination of alley housing, old fire traps and iniquitous dens; for some room to play outdoors and for supervised, attractive, adventuresome indoor recreation.

No, spending a million for policemen and adding other millions for jails won't do it. What is needed is a Government for the people with a broader social vision, and men and women in office stronger than the present run of job holders.

"Our Town In Pictures"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

We note with a deep feeling of pride and satisfaction the publication of the activities of our dual educational system in your special feature "Our Town in Pictures."

We entertain this feeling of deep pride and satisfaction because this is the first time in the history of Washington journalism that a fair and creditable presentation has been made by a leading Washington paper of the Washington public schools.

We have often lamented the fact that at graduation time in the heart of the world's greatest democracy, there was not one paper whose editor had the courage and fairness to let the world know that there were two sides of our educational system, and that they should be comprehended and recognized in any portrayal of the classes at graduating time.

Thus it is to be hoped that this iconoclastic precedent inaugurated by your most liberal, influential and conservative journal will cause all other papers here to recognize in like manner all schools at the Nation's Capital at graduation time by a fair presentation of pictures and other important events connected therewith.

We must take cognizance of the fact that the church via radio is more militant in its denunciation of intolerance and injustices of all kinds. And that this item is necessary to prove that our democracy can maintain its boast of "Liberty, justice and equality under the law."

The press must link up with, and in fact should lead in, all efforts leading to the realization of the dream of our forefathers when they founded this Republic as a haven for the oppressed peoples of the world.

We thank you with a deep feeling of gratitude, and hope for better things in the future.

Some Problems In Civil Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Passage of the Ramspeck bill will be of very little assistance to hundreds of employes being dismissed from Procurement Division of the Treasury Department and from PWA. The current lay-offs place us in an anomalous position in relation to the bill.

If our notice period and leave expire before the agency with which we have worked is made civil service by Executive order, we will not be included. If we join another agency and are not there exactly six months before it becomes civil service; or, if we find temporary civil service positions, we will, again, be outside the scope of the bill.

The time element which involves not only passage of the bill, but the President's confirmation of each agency creates a harassing situation. We must decide whether to remain as long as notice and leave will permit with the old agency, hoping that it may be included before we are off the pay roll; or whether to try immediately for a position with another agency, and take a chance on being able to complete the required six-months' period.

A large proportion of us in the Procurement Division have had from two to four or five years' service with the Government as, undoubtedly, have a similar group of employes in PWA. Failure to receive status under the Ramspeck bill would be an unjust and serious loss. If these years of service are applied toward our civil service status, they would mean for some of us the attainment of the security afforded by reinstatement status; for others, advancement toward this goal. They would, also, be applied toward old-age pension, and would increase job-seeking opportunities with those bureaus now under civil service.

The loss of these values is based not on merit, but on sheer chance. Employes with so many years of service surely deserve greater consideration than this. It was necessary for us to pass examinations to be hired by the non-civil service agencies, and, furthermore, those of us who were not good workers could not have survived the budget cuts and the annual appointment systems which have characterized the relief agencies.

Cannot something be done to assure us of fairer treatment than we are now receiving under such uncertain conditions, to give us the advantage and security we deserve?

Those employes, also, who are from States over their quotas, even though retaining their positions, encounter a situation just as unfair. The time to have considered the quota issue was in first hiring them. Now that they have given their service to the Government over a period of years, have they not as much right to security as others?

"Communist Technique"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Post of March 7 contains an editorial entitled "Communist Technique" which attacks the testimony of Benjamin Davis, jr., of the Communist Party, at the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on the antilynching bill Tuesday.

Since it is the editorial policy of your paper to give space to opposing views, we would appreciate the opportunity to make our position clear on this important piece of legislation.

The writer of this editorial seems to become a crystal-gazer and perceives a lurid connection between the activities of the Communists in this country for the passage of the antilynching bill and a carefully worked out technique in Moscow. According to him, although the Communists have taken a vigorous stand in favor of the passage of this bill they really don't want to see it pass. Following this line of metaphysical speculation, those who have been filibustering Federal antilynch legislation are really its friends, whereas others who have been championing the passage of these bills are really against it.

Your use of this form of logic against communists is hardly original, since in 1930, when we raised the then "radical" issue of unemployment insurance, we were accused by many of not really wanting to see the misery of the unemployed alleviated since greater suffering would lead to revolution.

We Communists have a very simple way of testing the sincerity of individuals and groups and that is whether their professions are followed by deeds and action. Applying this test to ourselves we can say that the struggles led by the Communist Party since its birth are conclusive evidence of genuine determination to advance the interests of the Negro masses.

The Negro people know and admire the struggles our party has led for the freedom of Angelo Herndon and the Scottsboro boys and for the organization of the Negro workers—employed and unemployed. In Washington the Communist Party has proven its devotion to the welfare of the Negro people by leading the campaign against police brutality, by fighting for decent housing, relief, jobs and suffrage.

When our party attacks the manner in which alleged friends of the antilynching bill have managed to keep it off the floor of the Senate we have but one motive and that is to bring to public attention the hypocritical behavior of those who, like The Washington Post, while professing indignation against the horrible crime of lynching are really out to knife this bill.

The progressive movement cannot be fooled into opposing the antilynching bill by the argument that "lynching is lessening every year." We know that although only 5 lynchings were "reported" in 1939 there were at least 20 unreported lynchings in Mississippi alone. The issue is therefore clear—the antilynching bill must be passed. No dragging out of the "red herring" will stop the fight of the American people for passage of this vital piece of legislation.

MARTIN CHANCEY,
City Secretary, District Communist Party.

Question Of Experience

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

If the Democrats think that Dewey is not Presidential timber because he lacks experience, never having been a Governor nor a Senator and knowing nothing, they say, of foreign politics—will they explain why Farley, one-time boxing commissioner of New York, a political organizer and Postmaster General, in name only, is so eminently qualified to fill the office of President of these United States? The Post Impressionist

Snake Bit

His name was George Sorley Fry, but we always called him Fish Fry. This might not have showed such great imagination on our part, but Fish had the greatest imagination I ever sat down and got hypnotized by and that's what it did to you. His conversation was wonderful and I could listen to him all night long. If Fish had any conversational fault it was that he talked too much about what hard luck he always had.

"I'm just snake bit," Fish would wail, "I'm just snake bit. Why, I'd have $1,000,000 if I wasn't so snake bit."

As it was I've gone out one door many a morning while the dawn was coming in the other just from sitting up and listening to Fish tell stories and talk about his hard luck, which brings me to what I think was Fish's best.

We were over at my friend Morrie's and there was a guy there from Meriden, Conn., who was pretty good at heaving the guff and he was topping Fish on several stories. He had just finished a story about something that had happened to him in Mexico when Fish butts in and says that reminds him of why he isn't a millionaire.

"When this terrible piece of hard luck hits me," said Fish, "I'm playing second cornet in Al G. Field's minstrel band and I ain't getting rich at it.

"We got a one-night stand in a jerk town named Selma, Ala.," said Fish, "when a fella comes in the lobby and stops in front of me. I'm just setting there wondering if I ain't going to blow my brains out trying to hit them high notes the old man always wants in his overtures when this fella interrupts.

"'Listen, buddy,' says the fella, 'You're in show business. I can tell you where there's an attraction you can get that'll make you $1,000,000.'"

Fish said he asked the man what the attraction was and the man said he knew where the oldest man in the world was.

"He's 400 or 500 years old," the fella told Fish, "and he's a sight to look at. Why, you can charge 50 cents from coast to coast and clean up."

"Can he be moved?" Fish said he asked the man.

The man said he could.

"We closed at San Antone," said Fish. "Oh, I forgot to tell you. I had to give that fella five bucks for the tip on the old man who was living in a cave across the border in Mexico, but I got all the directions and everything."

"You gave him five bucks?" asked Morrie.

"I believed the guy," said Fish, "and as it turned out he was right. I'd be a millionaire today, I tell you, if I wasn't snake bit."

"You're nuts," said the guy from Meriden, Conn.

"Wait," said Fish, holding up his hand. "Wait'll you hear about it."

"Well, we finish in San Antone and I leave the old cornet at the hotel and hired me a guy with a wagon who says he knows where this cave's at. I don't ask him anything about the oldest man in the world though, but he says he can take me to the cave.

"Well, sir," Fish continues, helping himself to another of Morrie's beers, "we drive to this place the guy tells me about and sure enough there's the cave. I get out and look all around and there ain't a house in sight. Just this cave. I asts the guy with the wagon if he knows what's inside and the guy says he reckons there's rats inside. 'O K.' I tells him, I'm going in. The guy with the wagon hands me a lantern and I light it and go in"

"By yourself?" asked Morrie and Fish told him yes.

"You're nuts," said the guy from Meriden, Conn.

"All right," said Fish, "I wasn't though. I just had hard luck. I was just snake bit like I've been all my life. Why, if I wasn't snake bit I'd be a millionaire"

"Go on," said Morrie, "you're in this cave with a lantern."

"All right," said Fish. "I go into this cave like the guy tells me to do that I give the five bucks to. I walk against the right wall and I begin counting my steps. I count 312 steps like the guy told me to.

"You're nuts is all I can say," said the guy from Meriden, Conn., who later turns out to be a bass player which makes me not so sure about whether he's nuts.

"I count out the 312 steps," Fish goes on, and then I turn to the right, and sure enough there's another cave leading off this one I'm walking in. Now, I go up this cave for 57 feet——"

"Like the 57 kinds of pickles," said the guy from Meriden, Conn.

"I go up this cave for 57 feet," said Fish frowning at the guy from Meriden, Conn., "and I come to some steps just like the guy said I would. Up at the top I see a light. A bright light. I've got my lantern the guy in the wagon handed me but I don't need it. I walk up toward this light and I come across the strangest thing I've ever seen——"

"Yeah?" asked Morrie.

"Yep," said Fish, "there he was, the oldest man in the world. He sat there on an old chair looking like a giant wrinkled prune. He was very old. He looked closer to 700 years old than 400 or 500. He was mighty, mighty old and this place he was setting in was mighty old and full of dust."

Fish stopped his story. He really knew how to time them.

"Go on," said Morrie.

"Well," said Fish, "it's hard to go on from here because here's where all the hard luck came in. I knew I was snake bit then if I never knew it before."

"What happened?" asked the guy from Meriden, Conn.

"Well, sir," said Fish, getting a throaty, tearful tone in his voice. "All that dust was too much for me. I sneezed."

"And what happened?" I asked.

"There's where my hard luck comes in," said Fish. "I sneezed so hard I blowed this old man right smack away. I sneezed so hard I blowed this oldest man in the world into a million little pieces. He was just that old and dried up. I'm snake bit, that's all."

As I was saying, maybe Fish talked too much about his hard luck. ARTHUR ALLEN.

Alaskan Journey

SAY IF YOU will that the country's going soft. Then you may pick up such a story as the Pinkertons' "Wilderness Wife" or their "Three's a Crew," telling of seven years' cruising north of Puget Sound. Or Bill and Ruth Albees' "Alaska Challenge" (Dodd, Mead, $3).

This crazy pair of kids—he a good carpenter, she an Illinois farm girl—decided to spend their honeymoon walking to Alaska. And they more or less did!

Because the Telegraph Trail from Prince George, B. C., was the normal route, they struck off toward Liard Post, with rubbers over their moccasins and 50-pound packs on their backs. They hitch-hiked a bit, with trappers' poling boats. They had no real map, and meandered more than half-lost in Indian moose country, which is heap bad going. They ran out of dried vegetables, ate a loon and lived on fresh moose meat for five weeks. They rafted down the Big Muddy and came through alive; Ruth Albee was the first white woman Liard Post had ever seen. No women—but there was an Oxford professor who had tired of civilization and lived 40 miles back in the bush. He'd married a squaw with several children by a previous marriage, and had an orthophonic Victrola with several hundred opera records.

They spent their first winter in Atlin, over the hump from Juneau, then built a boat and floated down the Yukon through Dawson to the Arctic Circle and Tanana. Then they took time out, while Ruth had her first baby in Fairbanks, and Bill raised giant vegetables. The second baby was born at Cape Prince of Wales, where Alaska comes closest to Asia; the Albees taught school there for a year. "Teaching school" included serving as postmaster, doctor, spiritual adviser and dance director to an Eskimo village. They loved it; they wanted to stay; officials at once were delighted, because they had despaired of ever finding white folks willing to live at such an end-of-the-world. Then the official wheels rolled, and their appointments were annulled; they hadn't fulfilled civil service requirements!

They tell their story straightforwardly and with spirit. I find such stories a welcome relief from newspaper headlines.

JOHN HARRIMAN, author of "Winter Term" (Howell, Soskin, $2.50), is said to be 35 and and a former student at St. Mark's. His book reads like the work of a bright and decent-spirited recent graduate. This is an anti-"Mr. Chips" novel, a mirror of the seamier side of faculty life in one of those New England preparatory schools which attempt to imitate the tradition, the discipline and the snobbery of English "public schools." Here is a headmaster whose smile was the envy of every headmaster in New England. Here is cold, hypocritical evasion of the issue of anti-Semitism. Here is the carefully inculcated suspicion of young enthusiasm, and here the sedulous faith, bordering on sadism, that "boys must learn to take it." And here, for once, the young instructor who has not yet been ossified into the school pattern wins the headmaster's lovely niece.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Winter Resort

MIAMI BEACH, March 13.—The vacation season is over down here now and the area is inhabitable. You can drive a car to and from the center in one set of fenders, find a parking space without a search warrant, get onto a golf course without a reservation and even find a restaurant where they are not too rushed to wash the dishes properly.

The mob has gone, the chaos is ended, the visiting Indians have gone with the wind and a vacation in Florida is something you now can take without restoratives.

The fish are biting, the weather is perfect, the inhabitants are showing a little politeness, and some attention is being paid to traffic rules, none of which could be said for the season up to the last two weeks. In short, the time to be here is when so few people, comparatively speaking, are here. You can get an idea of the change in pace from the fact no traffic cop has been run over by a visiting motorist in more than ten days

There is an air of tranquillity about the place, always excepting Tropical Park, where the wild-eyed, highly agitated North American Indians are making their last stand before the mutuel windows. This race track is getting the biggest crowds in its history. It has all the comfort of a Times Square subway station in the rush hour, except that the battle for seats is less intense in the subway.

Let it not be understood from the above that the area is by any means deserted. While the flight North has been tremendous, there are still more people here than ever before at this time of year. And this is not counting all the various Federal agents, Congressional committeemen and miscellaneous New Dealers here "conducting investigations." It's amazing how many Federal probers are finding that Miami Beach needs their attention as soon as the weather gets right. The rafts and diving platforms have been full o' 'em all winter.

Memories of the season: Grant Rice's story of the duffer, missing the ball completely at LaGorce, looking up at his companions and shouting, "Yes, you——. I'm counting it!" . . . The traffic cop on a snow-white horse explaining in midseason traffic, "He ain't really white; he's just turned pale in this mob" . . . The night club comedians all using the same jokes . . . Al Jolson trying vainly to root a horse home at Hialeah and a spectator inquiring, "Why don't he get on his knees?"

Yes, it was the biggest season even if the coolest. And it will not be over for another couple of weeks. With Tropical's closing the last Northerner departs . . . And, boy, do the natives need a rest!

The more you see of those women's bonnet styles for 1940, the more you realize that the Presidential candidates are throwing the wrong hats into the ring.

Finnish Finale

By Mark Sullivan

The Allied Isolation

FINLAND'S CAPITULATION is a major event in the whole world situation. It is a major blow to the Allies. The present tendency, in America, because we favor the Allies, is to underestimtae its importance. Commentators stress its military aspect, and say that in that sense it is not serious to the Allies. That may or may not be. But in a broader sense it is an extremely grave blow to the Allies.

Finland had to choose between two things within her own soul, two motivations. One was a fear, fear of Russia. The other was a reliance, reliance upon Britain and France. If her fear of Russia were the greater motivation, she would make peace. If her reliance upon Britain and France were the greater motivation, she would fight on. Her decision would be, in effect, a judgment passed by her upon the value of reliance upon the Allies, as against Germany and Russia.

That was the situation—and Finland did not fight on. It amounts to an expression of judgment that Russia, with Germany, is more formidable than the Allies.

In Finland's decision there is not, necessarily, any reflection upon upon the Allies. Very probably Finland did not mistrust the Allies' good faith at all. She may have felt merely that the Allies could not send enough help, or could not send help in time, or that the Allies might be prevented from sending troops across Sweden and Norway. Just why Finland did not rely upon the Allies does not matter.

With Sweden and Norway it was much the same as with Finland. They, like Finland, had two motivations. They balanced a fear against a wish. Their wish was that Finland be saved, for if Finland were not saved, Russia would be that much nearer their own boundaries. Had they consulted their wish, they would have relied upon the Allies, for they knew the Allies had promised help. But Sweden and Norway were warned by Germany that they must not let Allied troops cross their territory. And Sweden and Norway bowed to the demand of Germany. They regarded fear of Germany and Russia as more compelling than reliance upon the Allies. They, like Finland, took the course which suggested belief on their part that Germany and Russia are more formidable than the Allies.

PRACTICALLY all the smaller nations of Europe are, in one way or another, in the same position as Finland and Norway and Sweden. Denmark, Holland, and Belgium must choose between the same two motivations, fear of Germany and reliance upon the Allies. Upon these smaller nations, Germany will make demands, just as Russia and Germany made demands on the Scandinavian nations.

Germany will probably demand of Holland that Holland permit the Germans to use her soil—for air-bases, for passage of troops, or what not. Holland knows that she, alone, cannot resist. For resistance, she must rely upon Britain and France. Holland will be faced by precisely the same choice that Finland faced, choice between fear of Germany and reliance upon the Allies. Can we doubt that Holland, making that choice, may take into account the example of Finland, the same considerations that caused Finland to choose as she did?

Wish as you may, the fact is that Finland and the others, looking upon what has happened in the past, find some reason for their choice. Six months ago Poland relied upon the Allies—and Poland is gone. Twelve months ago, Czecho-Slovakia relied upon the Allies, had a guaranty from France—and Czecho-Slovakia is gone. Two years ago Austria had reason to suppose she could rely on the League of Nations, including the Allies—and Austria is gone. The little Baltic nations—Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania—thought they could rely on the League of Nations, including the Allies, but had to submit to Russia.

Two years ago France and Britain had centers of influence all through Europe, alliances, treaties of protection and mutual help. Today the influence of Britain and France has been almost exiled from the continent, outside France itself, and its immediate neighbors. Almost everywhere, Germany or Russia is dominant. The little nations, even though unwillingly and sullenly, submit to fear. Without much doubt, they prefer the ideals of the Allies, but they fear Germany and Russia. The unwillingness of the Allies to incite fear among small nations, and trade upon fear, accounts in part for what has happened. Their course is to their credit as civilized nations, but it has not helped in this war so far. From Munich on, it was Germany that was willing to be ruthless, and by that got her way.

What is said here about German and Russian dominance of most of Europe, omits mention of the Balkans. What is to happen there we may see as the war develops. And of course, outside Europe, on the sea and elsewhere, it is the Allies who dominate.

Forgotten Dictator

By Sydney A. Clark

Gen. Estigarribia Of Paraguay

From the Christian Science Monitor.

WHEN THE NEWEST dictator arrived in power in February, the busy world took almost no notice of him. Most of the great dailies gave him two or three inches of inconspicuous space and then hurried on to other topics. He is Gen. Jose Felix Estigarribia of Paraguay.

Paraguay's life has been terribly scorched by two of her previous dictators, the infamous Dr. Francia, who stands in history as the "perfect tyrant," and Lopez the Second, who led his nation into a war as fantastic as any in all history—a war which ultimately killed off practically every able-bodied male in the country. The accumulated lesson seemed to sink in and the post-Lopez constitution thumped out some very sonorous pronouncements about the sovereighty of the people.

But Estigarribia is now dictator and the Senate and Chamber of Deputies have resigned to give him a free hand. Informed people say this leader is "different." He is supposed to be benevolent. He is a graduate of St. Cyr and has presumably benefited by the splendid traditions of the French army school.

A hero of the Chaco War with Bolivia, the general flew from his post as Minister to Washington and prevailed on Paraguay to make terms when warfare seemed about to flare again. The dramatic flight has stood the test of two years. Every American nation hopes that Paraguay's extreme political measures will not undo the Chaco peace. President Estigarribia is hardly likely to besmirch his own bright niche in the Chaco hall of fame.

MY REACTIONS to the new dictatorship are personal rather than political. I think of the vivid, lovable capital, where Estigarribia lives and rules. Its name, Asuncion, recalls its founding on Assumption Day, 1536. It is undoubtedly the most primitive of all South American capitals and partly (but not wholly) for that reason it has a powerful appeal to the traveler who thinks in terms other than those of international comfort and de luxe hotels.

Paraguay tugs at one's affections in a way that is hard to explain. It is so desperately poor that a countrywoman thinks it profitable to walk a dozen miles into town with a dozen oranges, sell them for less than one American cent, and walk home in the afternoon with her "earnings." She has had a good day. American friends of mine, resident in Asuncion, held a summer fiesta one evening and bought seven dozen gorgeous roses for 30 cents, thereby creating something of a scandal, for they should have paid only 10 cents for the lot. Americans are always upsetting Latin economy by such lavish "handouts."

"Paraguay the Poor" is wholly unconcerned by poverty. The average Paraguayano honestly believes himself to be the luckiest person on earth merely to have been born into such a glorious nation. He has been taught so to believe by all the earlier dictators and this blessed contentment is the great stumbling block to men of energy like the present dictator.

GEN. ESTIGARRIBIA has weird new ideas of providing a water supply for the capital, of paving Asuncion's streets (not one is paved now), of building country highways, of pampering the country's policemen by providing each and every one of them with shoes! He even borrowed from the United States (when he was Paraguay's Minister in Washington) all of $3,000,000 for such purposes and that is a fabulous sum in the tatterdemalion rags that Paraguay calls money.

It takes about 300 pesos of the country to make one American dollar, so the above sum figures at nearly 1,000,000,000 pesos. It will go a long way in a country where roses cost 1½ cents a dozen and oranges 1 cent a dozen.

I have not intended to be good-neighborly or "pleasant" in stressing the lovability of Paraguay. It is something that really "gets me" in a big way. The casualness of the capital is beyond belief. There are, for instance, taxi stand telephones in every park in Asuncion. They are solely for the use of the taxi men, but everybody, save possibly the dictator himself, whose dignity must be preserved, uses these 'phones scot free and no one interferes. The policeman is a good fellow and he quite understands that he himself may be in need of a courtesy some day.

There are movies in Asuncion, but until very recently only one proprietor was able to show a film without a protracted break after each reel. He achieved continuity by means of a washtub wringer which he used as a supplement to his machine. He was the talk of the town for his great invention.

Poor Paraguay is rich in contentment with things as they are and one may count on this quality to keep at bay the more devastating forms of progress.

The War Of Exhaustion In Asia

Strain Is Acute In Both Nippon And China

By Mark J. Ginsbourg
Shanghai.

AMATEUR STRATEGISTS commonly described the 33-month-old Sino-Japanese conflict as a tug of war between time and space on the one side and a mailed fist on the other.

This interpretation calls for three dangerous assumptions:

Firstly, that the resources of Japan—a great industrial nation—are extremely limited and may reach the point of exhaustion at any moment;

Secondly, that every newly conquered mile that her soldiers have to patrol and every additional month of military deadlock bring Japan so much closer to a sudden economic collapse; and

Thirdly, that China, being an agricultural country, is self-sustaining and, therefore, can continue her resistance indefinitely.

An impartial analysis of all three of these assumptions shows them to be based on wishful thinking and full of glaring flaws.

THERE IS little doubt that Japan is facing a major economic crisis, which has its roots in the China adventure. There is an acute shortage of foodstuffs, consumption goods and raw materials needed by the nation's industries. There is a lack of skilled labor in the cities and of farmhands in the country.

The current shortage of power, necessitating the curtailment of industrial production, must—like a stone tossed into a river—cause widespread ripples. One of such ripples is the growing unrest among the workers whose income has been impaired by the factory shutdowns. Some mills are reported to have agreed to pay their employes 60 per cent of their wages for enforced idleness, but such palliatives cannot prevent discontent.

Japanese papers and official speeches are already full of guarded references to the danger of "possible social unrest" and "dangerous thought." One ultra-patriotic organization has just come out with an incautious demand for the rigid suppression of revived Communist agitation.

All these are unmistakable indications of a deep-seated crisis, which cannot be curbed by patch-up measures. Yet, it is dangerous to assume that such a crisis would terminate with a sudden explosion, which would, speaking figuratively, "knock Japan out."

Much more than Germany, Japan is a closely knit country, whose people are inured to hardships, proud of their strength and animated with acute xenophobia.

The current difficulties might easily result in a political upheavel, with extremists seizing power through a coup d'etat. Just as easily, there may be a revival of the wave of patriotic assassinations which studded Japan's history between 1931 and 1936.

But much more likely is a rapid but gradual regimentation of economic, political and social life under a military junta. The machinery for such regimentation is already available in the national mobilization law, under which every imaginable activity is subject to military control.

Both Germany and Italy—deprived of all vital supplies and markets—have demonstrated the remarkable resiliency of a completely regimented economy. There is no reason to believe that Japan, with the riches of Manchuria and coastal China available to her, would fail where her former allies did not.

JAPAN'S MAJOR strain lies admittedly in the continued hostilities in China. There are, however, indications that the Japanese command is now ready to abandon military operations, except when necessary to break up reformed Chinese units, and retire to the newly constructed fortifications in a few major cities.

This would, of course, immediately lighten Japan's financial burden. The onerous task of subduing Chinese resistance would be left to the projected puppet regime of Wang Ching-wei and to the air force.

It still remains to be seen if Wang and his backers (Chinese industrialists and bankers in the coastal cities and landlords) can overcome the general hatred of the invaders and the organizational talent of the Communists. Whether Wang succeeds or not, however, the Japanese will undoubtedly enjoy a long breathing spell.

This period of rest will not be without its rewards. The Japanese army is already collecting a heavy tribute from the "occupied territory." The Japanese-operated railways are bringing handsome returns, computed in many millions of dollars. So do the coastal ports (especially Tientsin and Tsingtao), the salt fields, the mines, waterworks and electric plants, the textile mills, filatures and cement works which were seized by the Japanese troops in the path of conquest.

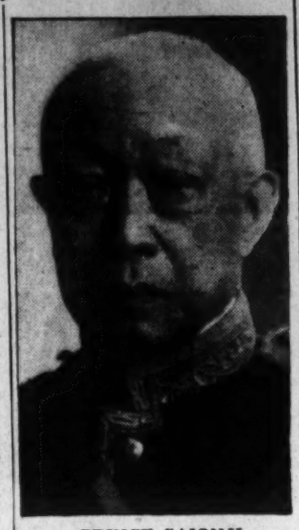
The Japanese supertrusts, working hand in glove with the army, are today operating immense monopolies in fields that extend from eggs to inland shipping, through tobacco and silk cocoons. It is, moreover, an open secret that many Chinese coastal ports remain unoccupied solely because they serve as gates for a flood of Japanese goods pouring into Free China, as far west as Kwangsi and Szechwan.

The conquest is beginning to pay its way. Admittedly, the process is slow, for immense rehabilitation must precede exploitation. Customs returns from Shanghai and other major Japanese-controlled ports, however, show a trade growth as steady as the tightening of the Japanese grip on Chinese economy.

Of China's two allies, General Time thus seems to be deserting her. Space lost its importance in October, 1933, when the Japanese war machine stopped at the Peiping-Canton line and took "time out" that was not interupted until the brief thrust at Nanning last November. Further Japanese advance, with the aim of gaining space, is extremely doubtful.

CONCENTRATION of attention on Japan's woes is of the greatest disservice to China. The latter today is facing difficulties as acute as her enemy's, and with reserves much slenderer than Japan's.

Let's take a look at China's finances. China's current expenditures total approximately Chinese $3,300,000,000 (roughly United States $225,000,000), of which $2,400,000,000 are earmarked for war. The amount, especially when converted into American dollars, is not too large.



PRINCE SAIONJI
Last of the elder statesmen, now aged and ailing

Japanese Discontent And Chinese Debility Increasing

Yet, these figures begin to loom large when contrasted with the Chinese government's slender revenues. Deprived of the bulk of customs and industrial income, China's coffers will this year receive no more—and probably less—than $1,200,000,000 (roughly United States $82,000,000).

Last year, the government covered most of the deficit by domestic loans, averaging Chinese $150,000,000 a month. Most of these loans, however, have been underwriten by the four government banks, which, obviously, cannot continue this practice indefinitely.

The interest that the bankers of Shanghai and other major coastal cities once had in government bonds is showing a growing coolness. The industrialists who have gone into Free China are reaping a golden harvest. Such men have unfortunately been few and Chinese papers are filled with bitter complaints against the indifference of Shanghai investors to the opportunities offered by Free China.

While it is true again that China, being a land of farmers, can feed and clothe itself, a full rice bowl cannot fight an invasion. To regain the lost territory, China must have offensive weapons which she, with her limited industrial equipment, cannot manufacture.

To acquire abroad the planes, trucks and guns which she needs, China must export. With the Japanese in full control of the coast, as well as of the areas producing exportable raw materials, China today unhappily watches a steady drop in her foreign trade.

With the fall of Nanning, China now has only two major doors to the outside world—the so-called "Burma Road" to India and the "Red Route" to Soviet Russia. Both of these are in full operation, but can scarcely carry the burden which China's needs would require.

THE SERIOUSNESS of the situation is obviously not realized by Congress. While China needs assistance much more desperately than Sweden or Norway, she was ignored in the allocation of funds by the Export-Import Bank on March 1.

There is an obvious tendency to place sentimental considerations, such an antipathy toward Russia, above protection of established American interests, menaced with extinction at the hands of the Japanese military.

If, and when, Congress wakes up to the need of affording such protection, it can follow two paths. One of these is the seemingly shelved embargo on the shipment of war supplies to Japan. The other is immediate and generous aid to China, for it is becoming increasingly evident that continued Chinese resistance supplies the most effective barrier to Japanese imperial expansion in Asia, at the expense of both China and the Western powers.

Serbs See No Great Victory For Russia

Copyright by New York Times

BELGRADE, March 13.—Conclusion of peace between Russia and Finland became known here today, and although neither the public nor official circles have had time to take an attitude yet, certain reactions are evident. Since the beginning of this northern war some hard thinking has been done here, and one cherished illusion has been destroyed—that of the invincibility of the Red army.

That illusion has not been restored, for it is generally agreed that Russia has gained her claims through sheer weight, rather than through skill and strategy or quality of leadership.

The disappointment that Finland has been obliged to yield more than was asked of her last fall is tempered by the memory of the three and a half months struggle and the lessons that it has taught. That the result is far from being an overwhelming victory for Russia is based on the following considerations:

1. Russia has put aside the puppet government of Otto Kuusine
2. Russia wished to stop the war and initiated the peace move.
3. Finland is not required to disarm and still has control of her foreign policy.
4. No threats are made against her internal policy, as were made by Germany on Czecho-Slovakia.

Bulgarians Rejoice At Peace In Finland

SOFIA, March 13.—The conclusion of the Russo-Finnish war has caused unlimited enthusiasm in Sofia, where the public wholly approved the steps taken by both nations. The newspaper Slovo, of Sofia, unconditionally approves of Russia's action in Finland, and says that the peace proves how wrong those people were who said that Russia wanted to interfere with internal politics in Finland.

The newspaper Mir congratulates Finland on having signed an honorable peace and saving herself from annihilation, comparing Finland's wisdom with the mistakes that Bulgaria made in 1918, when she refused a separate peace and had unjust terms forced on her when she was too weak to resist.

Sales Tax Approved By Citizens

Union Council Committee Backs D. C. Income Levy; Trucks Attacked

Substitution of a sales tax for the District income tax was urged last night by a citizens' association, while a labor union committee took the opposite stand.

Other matters discussed at citizens' meetings included milk inspection, liquor sales, the need for modern schools to replace portables and protests against trucks on Michigan avenue. One group opposed proposals for a public defender.

Rhode Island Avenue

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association last night unanimously urged repeal of the District income tax and substitution of a retail sales levy.

Members approved a report of the legislation committee, read by Henry Spitsbergen, which reiterated the unit's long standing approval of a minimum 2 per cent sales tax on commodities excepting food, medicine and articles otherwise taxed.

The association opposed proposals for a public defender to represent indigents unable to provide themselves with counsel in District trials.

A report read by John H. Fowler favored retention of the present system, with private attorneys appointed by the court, but asked the establishment of an "indigent defenders fund" to compensate lawyers for expenses in the course of the defense.

The unit tabled a motion favoring widening of Rhode Island avenue northeast between Twentieth and South Dakota avenue, by setting back sidewalks on the south side of the thoroughfare. Numerous members pointed out the proposed widening would be detrimental to residences and a church fronting the avenue.

Members approved a motion for pedestrian underpasses under Rhode Island avenue northeast at Mills avenue and at Twenty-sixth street to protect pedestrians from hazards from railroad tracks.

After several members pointed to the "prohibitive" local milk rates, the association went on record in favor of the Schulte bill which would bring inspection of District milk under the United States Public Health Service. The resolution also asked distributors to "experiment with all reasonable economies which will result in lowering the price to consumers."

Michigan Park

Declaring heavy truck traffic on Michigan avenue has become increasingly hazardous in recent months, members of the Michigan Park Citizens Association last night voted to direct a formal protest to the District Commissioners and to the Public Utilities Commission.

Most of the trucks, complainants said, are operated by an out-of-town company. The vehicles are running over the street at all hours, it was declared, but they use it most at one of the worst periods from the standpoint of traffic—the morning rush hour.

Members also protested the lack of sidewalks around the new Bunker Hill School. While more than $200,000 was spent on the building, no money can be found for concrete walks except at the front of the building, it was pointed out.

Floyd Bush, treasurer of the association, spoke. A certified public accountant, Bush told the men and women how to fill out their income tax blanks. John J. Hurley, president, presided.

North Randle Community

The North Randle Community Citizens Association indorsed Maj. Ernest W. Brown's proposal that combination licenses for the sale of packaged liquor and other merchandise in the same store be abolished, as suggested by the police superintendent before the House Liquor Investigation subcommittee last week.

A. C. Edwards, president of the association, was instructed to appear before the House Appropriations subcommittee today to testify on the need for a modern school building to replace the portable school at Minnesota avenue and E streets southeast, in which the association meets.

The association voted a protest to the District Commissioners over the failure of the Public Assistance Division to grant relief in two cases on which reports were heard. Letters were ordered written to the Zoning and Fine Arts Commission to inquire whether junk yards could be centralized in a particular place to remove unsightly dumps.

W. I. U. C. Committee

The Washington Industrial Union Council's executive committee last night affirmed its position in favor of the District of Columbia income tax. The group at the same time voted to oppose any form of sales tax for the District.

Arthur Bernstein will report the committee's action at the meeting of the council Monday night in the Federal Workers School, 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

1,500 at Trade Board Meeting Cheer as Flint Chief Hits Russia

Thunderous Applause Greets Gainard's Denunciation After He Tells How U. S. Is 'Treated With Every Indignity'

A denunciation of Soviet Russia by Capt. Joseph A. Gainard, skipper of the famous S. S. City of Flint, brought thunderous applause last night from 1,500 members of the Washington Board of Trade in the Mayflower Hotel.

Capt. Gainard, telling about the events at Murmansk whither the Flint had been taken by the German prize crew, said that the Russian authorities thwarted his every effort to communicate with Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt.

"I asked them to let me use one of their 11,000 war planes to fly to Moscow," Gainard said. "They refused. I suppose they were saving them for Finland.

"In Murmansk I saw the United States treated with every indignity that one nation can inflict on another. I am opposed to that government—morally, physically or in any other way, and I am opposed to any other person who is in favor of it."

The applause that met Gainard's philippic was the most tumultous that had been heard in the Mayflower ballroom in many a day.

Losses Million a Year

Frank J. Wilson, chief of the United States Secret Service, addressed the Board of Trade in connection with the "Know Your Money" program, which the Treasury Department has launched to reduce losses which merchants and others suffer annually through the acceptance of counterfeit money.

"The Secret Service records," Chief Wilson said, "establish that during a recent five-year period the loss to the public—mostly losses to merchants, through careless acceptance of counterfeit money—exceeded an average of $1,000,000 a year. So you can see the counterfeiter's market has been very good and that many clerks were careless or did not know their money."

The District WPA rolls will be reduced by some 3,000 between now and June 30, it was announced yesterday by the local director, Paul Edwards.

At present the rolls contain about 11,800, which must be cut down to 8,800, he said. The greatest slash will be of workers on the professional and service projects.

D. C. Liquor Investigation Is Halted

Stop Called After Lodge Says Legislators Intercede In ABC Cases

The House investigation of District liquor licensing was halted yesterday after Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, admitted that members of Congress sometimes intercede in cases, but insisted that the "pressure" is ineffective.

Chairman Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, recessed the public hearings indefinitely and said the subcommittee will start gathering data for inclusion in a report to be submitted to the House District Committee.

A few more witnesses may be heard, he said, but most sessions of the subcommittee henceforth will be in executive session until it later decides to ask Congress for funds to extend the inquiry and employ an investigator.

Members of the subcommittee are sharply split over the advisability of asking the House to finance a more thorough inquiry, although several of the Congressmen believe the informal investigation "hasn't scratched the surface."

Chairman Eberharter asked Lodge during the second day of cross-examination whether the ABC board had ever been subject to "direct pressure" from members of Congress.

"We have had some cases in which members got interested on both sides," Lodge replied. "The number has been very limited, however. The board has shown every possible courtesy to these members of Congress, but it has not yielded to this so-called pressure."

Lodge submitted a report to the subcommittee on the board's records of sales of licenses in answer to rumors that they have brought as much as $15,000 and that a license brokers' racket operates in Washington.

The report listed 28 license transfers made in 1939. The prices ranged from $1,000 to $8,750.

The threat of governmental operation of a local liquor dispensary was raised again by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who said that "sentiment in the House for the dispensary system is gaining a mile a minute."

Lodge supported the recommendation of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, that class C establishments be permitted to remain open until 2 a. m. Sundays. They now are required by law to close bars promptly at midnight.

He objected, however, to a suggestion that liquor be sold on Sunday or that the Sabbath ban be extended to light wines and beer.

Shucks, Lady, We've Got Lots Of Fire Engines

It was three days after a recent big fire in Washington. A telephone in fire alarm headquarters rang and a plaintive feminine voice inquired:

"Would you mind coming over and removing the fire engine from in front of my house?"

"I beg pardon," said an incredulous clerk.

"Three days ago there was a fire near here and your men left an engine blocking our driveway," said the woman.

"Are you sure it's a fire engine?" asked the clerk.

"I know one when I see it," said the voice, "and I wish you'd come and get it—we want to use our garage."

Sure enough, as the story goes, they found a fire engine—big, shiny and red—parked in front of the woman's house.

Dr. Ballou Tells Lions of Need To Aid Pupils

Boys and Girls Who Can't Continue Study Provide Real Problem

Preparing a program of fit boys and girls for places in the business world when they are unable to continue their education through college is one of the biggest problems confronting the District school system, Dr. Frank W. Ballou told the Lions Club yesterday.

The school superintendent spoke at a luncheon meeting at the Mayflower Hotel. He said the Board of Education is constantly called upon facilities to care for the increasing number of children who leave to expand vocational educational school in their 'teens to find positions.

"It is necessary," he said, "to provide a varied program to fit these boys and girls to make a living. It is becoming increasingly difficult for 'teen age youngsters to find employment and for this reason we must see to it they receive the best vocational training possible."

Dr. Ballou said he referred only to those students who are financially unable to continue their educations through college.

"We naturally have no trouble with those students who are preparing for college," he added.

Another problem, Dr. Ballou said, arises from increasing demands for extra programs outside regular class work. Civic, patriotic and religious groups flood the school board with requests for educational programs in which they are particularly interested.

"There is a limit to the number of new subjects we can introduce," said Dr. Ballou. "Each new subject means that we must sacrifice some other study. We can't care for them all."

Keep Curricula Up to Date, Judd Urges Schools

The urgent need for schools to revise their curricula—in the face of unemployment and other problems of youth today—was stressed by Dr. Charles H. Judd at the public school teachers' institute yesterday.

Dr. Judd, director of the education program of the National Youth Administration, addressed the teachers of Divisions 1-9 on "The Youth Problem and the Responsibility of Education." The session was held at McKinley High School after the schools had dismissed early to enable teachers to attend.

Dr. Judd pointed out that an estimated 4,000,000 young people, 16 to 24 years of age, are out of school and are unemployed. He also cited the rapid increase in the Nation's high school enrollment from 700,000 in 1900 to 6,700,000 now. Since unemployment is keeping more young people in high school than heretofore, only a changed curriculum can meet the more varied needs of this group, he said.

The institute was arranged to tie in with the District public schools' curriculum revision program now in progress. Teachers in Divisions 10-13 will hold a similar institute at 2:15 this afternoon at Armstrong High School to hear Dr. Judd speak on the same subject.

Murray, Brodie Face Board Today

Leo Murray and Hubert E. (Steve) Brodie, demoted detective sergeants, will face a special civilian trial board at 10 a. m. today at the District Building on charges which include accepting a bribe, neglect of duty and prejudicial conduct.

Commissioner Hazen appointed a special board of District officials to hear the case and changed the scene of the trial from the police trial board room to the board room at the District Building.

Jo V. Morgan, of the District's Board of Tax Appeals, was named chairman of the trial board. The other two members are Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, member of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, and Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

77,047 Attend Neighborhood House in Year

Barney Board Has Annual Session, Receives Report

Attendance at Barney Neighborhood House last year totaled 77,047, the board of directors was told yesterday at its annual meeting, and in January and February of this year, attendance had to be curtailed. This was revealed by Miss Margaret B. Merrill, head resident, in her annual report to the board.

Of last year's attendance, Miss Merrill said, 11,106 were in the girls' club; 24,212 in boys' clubs; 1,806 in adult clubs; 4,296 in the kindergarten; 2,949 in the nursery; 574 in the music school; 1,851 in the story hour; 2,452 in the library; 4,752 in vacation school; 4,268 for the spring festival, and 3,219 for special events. She said greater attendance could not be handled without additions to the present staff of 10.

Attending the meeting were Mrs. George Thorpe, who presided; Miss Mary B. Adams, Mrs. Adelbert Althouse, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Baldwin, Mrs. Wallace S. Dempsey, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Ernest Draper, Col. Henry P. Erwin, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Howard S. LeRoy, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Dr. L. F. Schmeckebier, Mrs. Merle Thorpe and Miss Ellen Vinson, board members. Associate members present were Mrs. Louise Fraser, Miss Pearl Waugh, Miss Olive Williams, Miss Louise Newell, H. Loren Fassett and Arthur Lambert.

Youth Indicted In Holdup Held In 3 Robberies

Victims at Line-up Fail to Identify Any of 20 Suspects

On the credit side of the crime ledger, police last night wrote the arrest of a 20-year-old taxi driver sought for a year on a holdup indictment and wanted in connection with three robberies of a jewelry store in three months.

On the debit side they had a lineup of 20 holdup suspects which failed to light a spark of recognition in victims of 35 holdups who viewed them.

With the arrest of Arthur T. Penn, 20, of 1219 Otis place northwest, police had in custody a youth whose 6-year sentence by Judge Fay Bentley five years ago for joy riding aroused a storm of criticism and brought Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to the woman jurist's defense. At that time Judge Bentley revealed Penn had been arrested in 1931, and that he had been in court ten times in five years.

Detectives said he admitted robbing Castelberg's jewelry store three times since December 17. They said half of $1,000 loot from the three robberies was recovered in pawnshops and second-hand stores.

Last night's lineup at headquarters will be followed tonight by a lineup of 60 colored suspects in 150 holdups, pocketbook snatchings and armed robberies. The crimes occurred in the last three months.

Lincoln Dodge, 37, a chauffeur, of 1740 P street northwest, was held up in an alley near his home last night by a colored man who, Dodge said, wore clothes several sizes too large. He produced a gun and took $45, most of Dodge's savings.

Mrs. Phillips Convalescing

Mrs. Henry Morton Phillips, second vice president of the District Federation of Citizens Associations, was reported yesterday to be convalescing at her home, 1211 Fern street northwest, following a major operation two weeks ago at Garfield Hospital.

Allen Seeks Home for Ill Indigents

Favors $450,000 Building to Relieve Crowded Conditions In D. C. Institutions

Commissioner George E. Allen announced yesterday he would seek Budget Bureau support for a $450,000 convalescent home providing 250 beds for the indigent sick.

The cost for caring for the convalescent patient is about one-half the cost for treating those acutely ill, he said. Such a home, which is lacking in the District, would relieve the overcrowding not only at the municipal hospitals but also at the welfare institutions.

In a report submitted to Allen by Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, it was pointed out that the construction cost per bed at the proposed convalescent home would be $1,800, whereas the cost at a general hospital ranges between $2,200 and $3,000. Dr. Seckinger proposed that the home be built on the Gallinger Hospital grounds.

Commissioner Allen said the proposal probably would not be brought up before the House District subcommittee on appropriations which probably will finish with the budget hearings by the end of this week. He said he would bring the matter up before the Senate District subcommittee on appropriations, providing the Budget Bureau gives its approval of the project.

The Commissioner suggested a convalescent home last week following a report on the Blue Plains Home for the Aged in which it was said that some of the inmates should be in a convalescent home. It has been estimated that some 25 per cent of the Gallinger patients are at a stage in their treatment where they no longer require a hospital bed or hospital attention, but rather attention in a convalescent home.

Citizens Ask Hearing

Spokesmen for 24 citizens organizations have asked for time this afternoon when the House subcommittee on District appropriations holds its final hearing on the 1941 District supply bill.

Chairman Millard Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, said the hearing will start at 1:30 p. m. and continue until all witnesses are heard. In the morning the subcommittee will complete the hearing of municipal officials.

With only four days devoted to the executive hearings, the House subcommittee has set a new record in speed in the handling of the District budget by a Congressional committee. The bill will be marked up next week.

Final hearings on the requests for additional appropriations for local welfare institutions will be held this morning. Members of the subcommittee have indicated, however, that appropriations in general will be kept close to the estimates recommended by the Budget Bureau.

RKO-Keith's Breaks Out Another Double Bill

'House of Seven Gables,' 'Black Friday' Run Up Three Hours of Turgid Drama; Disney's Prize-Winner Also on Bill

HAVING COMPILED an exceedingly opulent week some months ago with a duplex bill of shudder subjects, RKO-Keith's Theater yesterday launched a similar enterprise. Instead of reviving two chills-and-fever melodramas, like "Frankenstein" and "Dracula," the Fifteenth street house, for its new bill, offers two new pictures, one of which boasts both of the stars of its earlier experiment.

BELL

Both of the new items, "The House of Seven Gables" and "Black Friday," happen to be Universal productions, Universal being the industry's specialist in gooseflesh drama. The more circumspect of the dual exhibits is "The House of Seven Gables," shrewdly adapted to the cinema from the Nathaniel Hawthorne story by Lester Cole and Harold Greene. There are, of course, overtones of mystery and tragedy in this classic tale, but they are given admirable plausibility by a cast of excellent selection, headed by George Sanders and Margaret Lindsay and including, among others, Vincent Price, Dick Foran, Nan Grey, Alan Napier, Gilbert Emery, Miles Mander and Charles Trowbridge.

There has been no attempt here to place "The House of Seven Gables" in the cycle of horror pictures. It is, on the contrary, played with earnestness, sincerity and a fine eye to realism. Mr. Sanders, whom we applauded for efficient work in "Green Hell," the season's worst picture, again adds to the impressiveness of his stature as an actor of more than ordinary versatility. The others in the cast effectively match Mr. Sanders' skill.

"Black Friday" is of an entirely different stripe. "Stripe" may be precisely the word, since the action opens with the disturbing scene of Dr. Ernest Sovac marching himself from his cell to the electric chair, while the prison chaplain chants the Lord's Prayer. The story is told by the flashback method, after that. Dr. Sovac, it seems, has been guilty of the illegal operation of transplanting the brain of a vicious gangster into the body of a mild and learned professor of English in an Eastern college. Red Cannon's mind in Prof. Kingsley's body works exciting and fearful havoc. Taken by the medical scientist to the environs of Red's major maraudings, Prof. Kingsley proceeds to pay off a few overdue debts, stored away in the Cannon cerebral cells which he has inherited to save his life after a motor car smashup. It might be stretching the analogy a little to say that here is Dr. Eliot actuated by the mental processes of Al Capone, but that is the general implication. The results are as fantastic and far-fetched as you might expect them to be. The whole sinister business, at least, is out of the groove.

Both Boris Karloff, cast as the bungling scientist, and Bela Lugosi, as the gangster chieftain, who comes into Red Cannon's domain, abandon their grotesquery in their present joint chore and play "straight." Mr. Karloff, minus his usual terrifying disguises, is a rather fine looking and soft-spoken man of medicine. Mr. Lugosi is a satisfyingly crooked crook, a little more on the beefy side than he has been before—and it would be well to note that I didn't say "hammy," although the temptation was great. It was only that Mr. Lugosi is a little heavier than we have been accustomed to see him. There are some nice supporting performances in "Black Friday," notably those of Stanley Ridges, former leading man of the National Theater Players, who turns in a telling job as Professor Kingsley; Anne Nagel, as the cabaret singer, and Murray Alper, as a nonplussed bellhop.

Despite the fact that the double-barreled bill at Keith's is crowding "Gone With the Wind" by running a full three hours, there is still time found for a new issue of the Pathe News and Walt Disney's Academy Award winning Technicolor short subject of "The Ugly Duckling." It is not quite clear why Mr. Disney won the award with this one. It is clever, as all of his cartoon comedies are, but not clever enough for such high distinction. There is a slightly shady innuendo in the fable. "The Ugly Duckling" turned out to be a swan!

It is by no means a surety that two "B" pictures add up to an "A," but there can be no gainsaying the fact that yesterday afternoon's capacity crowd cherished the Keith bill as one of the treats of the season. It is certainly an ample money's worth in point of total length. A bargain for those who have twice as much time as usual on their hands.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 13 (INS). Fritz Mandl and his millions will arrive shortly in Hollywood accompanied by Dr. Wilmos Szekely. Mandl was once wedded to the glamorous Hedy Lamarr and before the Hitler regime controlled the munitions plants in Vienna. Unlike many of the Austrians, he managed to get his money out of the country and invest it in South America, where he is now living in affluence.

LOUELLA PARSONS

His purpose in coming to Hollywood at this time is to finance Dr. Szekely in a motion picture deal. Szekely learned his movies from Alexander Korda in Vienna and more recently he was associated with Mussolini's film company, for whom he produced Isa Miranda's last Italian movie. So far, Mandl has no releasing plans, but I hear tell he is negotiating both with Columbia and R.-K.-O. With all the money he is reported to have he should have no trouble in making a tie-up.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Frances Farmer, who carried the torch so long for Clifford Odets, is happy once again with Norman Burnside, also a writer; Buddy Westmore had dinner with Rosemary Lane last Sunday, at Mama's invitation and now all is well. Lola Lane's smiles are for Bill Marshall since she and Dick Purcell said adieu; Sally Haines, Bert Wheeler's former, and Lou Lindsey, a cosy twosome at the Sphinx Club. That reminds me, Lloyd Pantages is master of ceremonies every Sunday at this night spot and doing a good job; Greg Bautzer is beauing Elaine Shepard about this week; Marlene Dietrich and John Durant dining tete-a-tete at Ciro's; Olivia de Havilland and Raphael Hakim, French producer, sitting at an adjoining table. Also Frank Freeman, jr., and Jeanne Cagney.

Ria Gable's hat made entirely of hyacinths much admired at the B. B. Robinson cocktail party. These flower chapeaux seem to be all the style and Jane Winton, in whose honor the party was given, wore one that looked like a huge nosegay; Glen Ford, Columbia's new tall, dark and handsome, and Lynn Blythe, Earl Carroll girl, an item; Alex Korda, who made a flying trip back to Hollywood on business, planes out for New York to join Merle Oberon. Merle has been suffering with a bad throat; Jean Rogers is the victim of an impacted wisdom tooth; Bob Cobb is throwing a stag cocktail party for Connie Mack.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 13.

THE STORY now is being told of a poor peasant in Poland, who had seen the terror come and fell victim to the persecution against his nation and race . . . An official came to his room and notified him that he'd have to move . . . "Move?" asked the peasant. "But where?" . . . "There are a thousand places you can move to," the official assured him. "Here, look—and take your choice" . . . He showed the peasant a map of the world . . . The weary peasant studied it, and then sighed: "Any place else?"

JEREMIAH T. MAHONEY, who was the opposing candidate against Mayor LaGuardia, is one of the possibilities for the job of fire commissioner. LaGuardia is wooing Tammany support for the November campaign . . . Readers Digest sent J. P. McEvoy to Detroit, to prepare an article about Father Coughlin. It will appear in the next issue, and is called "Thorn of the Little Flower" . . . That much-publicized backstage robbery at "The Weak Link" actually involved less than $100—with Lloyd Gough losing $80 of it . . . Harold Lloyd, who is one of the heads of The Shriners, is in New York now receiving instructions from noted after dinner-speakers concerning public addresses.

FOR THE PAST twoo weeks an annual amount of newsper space has been devoted to Honeymoon Isle, off the coast of Tampa, whose owner invited a group of newlyweds to spend their honeymoon there . . . This is part of a publicity scheme to combat the fame of Miami and Palm Beach as gay winter resorts for young happy people . . . The west coast towns of Florida resented the campaign to present their clientele as wheel-chair convalescents and have incorporated to concentrate upon Honeymoon Isle as a paradise for the young.

WILLIAM GREEN will be tendered a $25-a-plate testimonial dinner in May. Twenty dollars from each ticket will be allocated to charitable enterprise . . . Gladys George, who spurned the mother role in the film version of "Our Town," because she didn't want to appear old before her public, has accepted the mother role in "Lady in Waiting." In that picture, an adaptation of "The Nutmeg Tree," she'll be the mother of a 17-year-old daughter . . . Richard Wright, author of the new best-seller, "Native Son," is completing another novel. He'll go to Mexico when it's finished . . . The new Royal Palms, which changed its name to The Tropics last week-end, will have to find another name—because "The Tropics" has been registered by another cafe owner.

BEN BERNIE met Harry Levant, and confessed: "I'm hurt because your brother never mentioned me in his book. After all I was the first to bring Oscar around. He should have mentioned me—even a rap, but at least a mention" . . . Bernie then was apraised of the fact that Oscar did mention him in the book—three times. About Bernie he wrote: ". . . the repetitive raconteur and genial maestro, Ben Bernie (whose lust for ennui is his real metier—or is it horses?) I was pianist in his hand and co-protege (at the usual Bernie rates) . . . I left Ben Bernie in the middle of one of his bad jokes" . . . "Well, I have an astigmatism." Ben apologized. "I can only read Boosts."

PAUL WENDEL, whose kidnaping and hoax-confession resulted in the postponement of Hauptmann's execution is preparing a lawsuit against one of the city's commissioners . . . Eddy Duchin is back in New York vacationing. He'll resume his road tour next week . . .

Metropolitan

"The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" resumed its downtown run yesterday at the Metropolitan Theater after an earlier engagement at the Earle.

Surely one of the finest films of the year, "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" boasts not only a superb portrayal of a great figure of science by Edward G. Robinson, but also a screenplay of enormous power and restraint by John Huston, Heinz Herald and Norman Burnside. Thanks to the outspoken frankness of the script and the always human interpretation by an understanding cast, one's attention never lags, one's sympathy never is strained.

Dr. Ehrlich it was, who, after struggling with cures for tuberculosis and its allied germs, finally turned to an antidote for syphilis. The professional detail employed in this discussion fascinates the layman rather than boring him, truly a remarkable achievement for so technical a problem. Had the matter been handled superficially, the film would have lost its force; yet had it overstrained in its attempt to interest, the result unhappily may have been mere sensationalism.

Mr. Robinson's portrait, from his make-up to his always convincing actions, has already been widely praised, bringing early supporters for the 1940 Academy Award.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Eddie Small certainly has a picture in "My Son, My Son." But instead of starring Brian Aherne, Madeleine Carroll and Louis Hayward, it created a new star for Metro whose name is Loraine Day. She's terrific. It's the best thing Brian Aherne has ever done. And Scotty Beckett, the child who played the young son, was even better than Hayward. But I wish they hadn't felt it necessary to give it a happy ending. Only in pictures does a leopard change its spots as quickly as the son in "My Son, My Son." And if Madeleine Carroll wants to hold her title as glamour girl, she'd better grab George Cukor's diet—but quickly.

HOPPER

Frances Farmer, who's having a $1,500 row with the Theater Guild in New York, starts a picture here next week with Eddie Small—but she won't be allowed to make another one until she's settled her present controversy. This picture happened to be signed before the monetary incident reared its ugly head.

Sol Lesser is dickering with Alex Woollcott for a picture. One of those "sign-your-own-ticket" affairs. And while lunching at U. A. last week, Alex saw "Our Town" and did raves about little Miss Martha Scott, who was in the original play in Yet York and was brought out here for it. She's playing her first picture. Woollcott says she's a star in the making. We hope so, she's a sweet kid.

Have you noticed how the initials G and W seem to insure the success of a picture? Witness: "Gone With the Wind," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Grapes of Wrath."

Kurt Bois, one of the co-authors of "Thank You, Columbus," speaking of swinging the old classics and ballads, remarked: "The old masters composed them—the modern generation decomposes them."

Bob Hope says there are plenty of producers in Hollywood who should thank their lucky stars. Well, some of the[m] co.

Gladys George Returns to Stage Monday

'Lady in Waiting' Opens at National; Other New Bills

"LADY IN WAITING." Gladys George returns to the stage after a five-year absence in Hollywood as the gay Julia in Margery Sharp's dramatization of her amusing novel, "The Nutmeg Tree," at the National Theater Monday evening. Miss George's phenomenal success as the picture star in "Personal Appearance" has created much advance interest in her new comedy. Brock Pemberton and Antoinette Perry, producer and director of the earlier play, again join hands with the blonde star, whose supporting company will include Alan Napier, Leonard Penn, Carol Curtis-Brown, Stephen Ker Appleby, Agnes Elliott-Scott, Mary Heberden and Michelette Murani. The action details the adventures of a one-time revue dancer called to France to inspect the prospective husband of a daughter she has not seen in 15 years. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Belasco

"SAINT JOAN." Luise Rainer's well-received debut on the American stage for the benefit of the American Red Cross European Fund continues through Saturday evening. The Academy Award-winning film star is supported in the Bernard Shaw play by members of the Washington Civic Theater, including Murray Sheehan, Norman Rose, Rudulph Justice Watson, Mason Wright, C. Kenneth Banghart, Austin Gattis and William F. Zuckert, jr. The production was directed by Erwin Piscator and Day Tuttle and supervised by William M. Girvan. Matinee Saturday afternoon.

Palace

Earle

"CASTLE ON THE HUDSON." John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien and Burgess Meredith have the leading roles in this story of life beyond the barriers of the law. Margot Stevenson, Jerome Cowan, Henry O'Neill, John Litel and Guin "Big Boy" Williams head the screen drama's supporting company. "Leap Year Flashes," is the stage revue, featuring in its line-up the Duffins, international dancers; the Three Freshmen, "Bored With Education;" Marc Ballero, Wilson Lang and the Roxyettes. "Teddy, the Rough Rider," with Sidney Blackmer as Roosevelt the First, is the technicolor short subject. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"THE MAN FROM DAKOTA." A Civil War story of two Yankees who escape from the Confederate prison at Belle Island, this melodrama stars Wallace Beery, with John Howard and Dolores Del Rio. The film is adapted from a story by MacKinlay Kantor. Donald Meek, Robert Barrat, Addison Richards, Frederick Burton and John Wray are in the cast. Blackstone, the magician, heads his parade of a thousand wonders as the Capitol's stage attraction. Blackstone's properties include a rope which rises high in the air, a Hindu who climbs out of it into thin air and a horse which disappears. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

Trans-Lux

"THE BIRTH OR THE MOVIES." Clippings from the film records of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, Mary Pickford's first picture and the early screen work of Bernhardt, Mix, Chaplin, Valentino and Dietrich form the central short subject coming to the newsreel theater. "County Fair," depicting the famous one of Danbury, Conn., and "Blackboard Revue" are the other supporting subjects. Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

"REVELS OF 1940." Amy Fong, the Chinese beauty whose charms are familiar to Washington audiences, heads the company of this new burlesque production opening Sunday afternoon. George Murray's witticisms and Aloha's beauty are featured, while the supporting cast includes Frank X. Silk, Conny Ryans, Jack La Mont, Eileen Hubert, Allene Dale, Joan Mavis and the 16 Revels.

Atlas

"SONS OF THE PIONEERS." Film and radio favorites noted for their cowboy music, this group of Westerners opens a three-day engagement Sunday afternoon under the leadership of Bob Nolan, composer of "Tumblin' Tumbleweeds" and "Ridin' Home." On the screen, Mickey Rooney stars in "Judge Hardy and Son," and "The Days of Jesse James" has its first local showing.

Howard

SKELTON BROOKS, composer of "Darktown Strutters' Ball" and "Some of These Days" is one of three headliners opening tomorrow on the Howard stage. F. E. Miller, who gained fame with his late partner in the team Miller and Lyles, and Lucky Millinder's orchestra are the other ranking stage performers. On the screen, an all-Negro film, "Double Deal," features Jeni LeGon, Shelton Brooks and F. E. Miller. Reserved seat midnight performance Saturday.

Little

Elizabeth's England fought a war of ideas, too. The Little Theater's current revival of "Fire Over England" not only stars figures who were not so significant when the film first appeared several seasons ago, but it expresses a reasoning for battle which is curiously similar to that which we hear today.

Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier and Raymond Massey would require a neat mint to lure them into a single film today, after their respective successes in "Gone With The Wind," "Wuthering Heights" and "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." But here they are, importantly cast in support of another performer whose rise in Hollywood has been as meritorious, if not so meteoric, Flora Robson.

Miss Robson has the ever-fascinating role of Elizabeth, not the love-sick Elizabeth of Maxwell Anderson's poetic drama nor of Bette Davis' enthusiastically greeted film, but of a rugged ruler, a woman whose strength was that of all her subjects. There are moments of genuine emotion in Miss Robson's Elizabeth, notably those in which she views her white hair and hollow face in a cruel mirror, but for the most part she is royally concerned with Philip of Spain, his approaching Armada and his restriction of personal freedom for his subjects.

With a joint appearance in "Romeo and Juliet" in the immediate future, Mr. Olivier and Miss Leigh very likely take more of one's attention now than they did when the film was first released. The girl who was to win 1939's Academy Award gives a particularly interesting portrayal of the rather stereotyped heroine.

Massey's Philip of Spain is spoken in that actor's surpassingly fine voice and the production, for the most part, is worthy of its mentor, Alexander Korda.

Charles Marsh Shepperson, 60, for 18 years Alexandria correspondent for The Washington Post, died yesterday at his home, 907 Prince street.

Mr. Shepperson, a veteran of the Spanish-American War and the World War, had not enjoyed good health since he was stricken with influenza while serving in France 22 years ago.

Board Rejects Bid to Rehear Store Zoning

Paves Way to Build Sears, Roebuck Shop On Wisconsin Ave.

A request by the House District Committee to rehear the Sears, Roebuck zoning case was rejected yesterday by the District Zoning Commission, thus paving the way for the construction of a retail store at Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle street northwest.

The commission also refused the petition of several citizen associations for a new zoning hearing on the first commercial property involved in the case.

A rehearing of the case "would serve no useful purpose," the commission stated, adding "anyone or any group believing that the Zoning Commission has acted arbitrarily in the premises has access to the courts where a full review of the case may be had."

A new zoning hearing had been requested by the Friendship Citizens Association, the American University Park Citizens Association and Immaculata Seminary.

The commission said it had examined the plans for the proposed building, which will provide for a one-story and basement store with roof parking for about 280 cars. The parking roof will have two entrances and two exit ramps, of which only one entrance ramp is located on Albemarle street, the commission said.

President Bars More FloodCash

While delegates to the thirty-fifth convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress were gathering in Washington yesterday, President Roosevelt told three Senators that Congress should authorize no more river, harbor or flood projects this session.

The association meets today at the Mayflower Hotel with a discussion of "drastic discriminatory budget slashes" in amounts for such work foremost on its agenda.

Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward further authorizations for river and harbor and flood control was revealed in a White House conference with Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the Senate Commerce Commttee, and Senators Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, and McNary (Republican), of Oregon, members of the committee. Bailey said the President believed sufficient authorizations for such work had been made for the next two or three years.

Last year the President vetoed a bill authorizing several score survey projects, passed by Congress as a substitute for a measure authorizing projects costing several millions. The three Senators yesterday indicated their conversation with Mr. Roosevelt was taken as an indication he would veto any such bill this year.

Prior to official opening of the convention today, the association's projects committee yesterday completed two days of hearings on projects whose sponsors sought indorsement of the Congress.

Today's sessions of the congress will open at 10 a. m. at the Mayflower, with William J. Driver, chairman of the board of the congress, presiding. Commissioner Hazen will deliver an address of welcome.

Yesterday the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association met at the Mayflower, with Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, president of the congress, presiding. Speakers included Judge B. F. Young, Fifth Louisiana Levee District; J. E. O. Beck, St. Francis Levee District of Arkansas; J. W. Bradford, Yazoo-Mississippi Delta Levee District; J. G. Burke, Laconia Levee and Drainage District; E. B. Genin, Atchafalya Basin Levee District; Brig. Gen. Max C. Tyler, president, Mississippi River Commission, and Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, chief of Engineers, U. S. Army.

Kansas Legislator Addresses W. C. T. U.

Rep. Rees Says Alcohol Has No Place In a Democracy, Adds More Is Spent For Drink Than for Relief in U. S.

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The time is not distant when the people of this country will realize that the use of alcohol—and the abuse of it—do not belong to a democracy, Representative Edward H. Rees, of Kansas, declared last night, addressing the annual banquet of the District W. C. T. U. at the Roosevelt Hotel. Introduced by Mrs. Ida B. Ramsey, State president, he cited figures showing more was spent for drink last year than by all the public agencies for people who are on relief.

"One of the most severe criticisms that can be leveled at our democracy is our crime situation and the manner in which we have dealt with it. America's crime record is a national disgrace. The most serious phase is the number of youthful criminals," he declared.

"So long as the greatest single cause of crime—the excessive use of intoxicating liquor—is permitted, protected and even promoted by the Government, crime will continue to be as deadly and costly as war. Right now, the combination of liquor and other violations is growing worse.

400 Liquor Stores In Business Here

"There are 400 hard-liquor stores in the Nation's Capital. In Virginia there are 89; in the State of Alabama, 58, and in Pennsylvania—where the population is 16 times as great—there are 560 such stores.

"What does that have to do with the situation? We will look at it for a moment. Last year there were approximately 18,000 arrests in Washington of persons who were either drunk in public places or driving while under the influence of liquor. Those in authority say that intoxication is the cause of 55 per cent of all jail commitments. Right here, in your Nation's Capital, it costs $1,000,000 to take care of the prisons each year, and the workhouse population has increased 80 per cent since 1930.

"One of the national health problems today is what to do with the increasing number of alcoholic addicts.

"The Travelers' Insurance Co., in a report, entitled 'Lest We Forget,' has this to say: 'The time will come when driving after drinking will be placed in the same category as carrying concealed weapons and highway robbery.'

"The National Safety Council, in a report, states that from 9 to 13 per cent of the persons involved in automobile accidents had been using intoxicating liquor. We have a most glaring inconsistency in the promotion of safety campaigns. We are urged to drive safely and sanely. We must observe the signs on the highways and be careful—and then we clutter the highway and roadsides with signs urging the use of alcoholic drinks of all kinds. Newspapers and magazines on the one hand have articles about safety—and on the next page you will read attractive advertisements about the fine qualities of alcoholic beverages. The expenditure of millions for safe highways doesn't fit in very well with the advertising of a thing that makes driving hazardous.

More for Drink Than for Schools

"I would like to direct your attention to a few striking comparative figures: We spent about $2,000,000,000 in taxes for our elementary and high schools last year—and about $600,000,000 for our universities and colleges. The American people spent approximately $5,000,000,000 for alcoholic beverages. Our expenditure in 1939 for elementary and high school education was $15.30 per capita. It was $38.93 for alcoholic beverages. We spent more money last year for drink than was spent by all the public agencies for the people who are on relief.

"We must attack this situation from a much broader scope than we have tried to do it before. We can't ignore the moral side of it, of course—but we've got to take into consideration all these other phases of the question. All forces interested in this question must join hands and work together for a broad, planned program of education through the schools, through the home and through the church. But also through all other groups of all kinds, bringing the attention of the thinking public to the demoralizing effects of the excessive use of intoxicating liquor upon the social, moral and economic well-being of the people of this country. Give everyone to understand that this is a question that involves everybody."

Congressional Club Honors Mrs. Bankhead

Those assisting at the tea table will be Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, sr., of Tennessee; Mrs. Schuyler Otis Bland, of Virginia, and Mrs. Joe Smith, of West Virginia, in addition to the following ladies from Alabama: Mrs. Pete Jarman, Mrs. John J. Sparkman, Mrs. Luther Patrick, Mrs. Frank W. Boykins and Mrs. George M. Grant.

Club Favors Equal Rights

The proposed equal rights amendment was indorsed yesterday afternoon by the Club of the Hour at its regular monthly meeting, held at Alva Belmont House, headquarters of the National Woman's Party, which is sponsor of the amendment. Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison, president of the club, presided at the business meeting, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, was in charge of the program. Mrs. Wiley is national chairman of the National Woman's Party.

In addition to indorsing the amendment for equal rights, the club went on record in favor of restoration to the budget of $23,000 for continuation of education for handicapped children in the District.

Representative D'Alesandro, of Maryland, who was to have addressed the club, was unavoidably detained by a committee meeting and could not be present. In his absence, Mrs. Horace J. Phelps, chairman of welfare for the District Federation of Women's Clubs, made a report on conditions in the Receiving Home and at Blue Plains, on which he was to have spoken.

Jesse Suter was also on the program, discussing the Hatton Sumners resolution in the House, providing for national representation for the District—a measure for which the club has gone on record.

A musical program was presented by Beatrice Pinkney Jones.

AID FRENCH POILUS—Through the efforts of Washington women at least two canteens will be established for the relief of the watching and waiting Poilus who are protecting Paris.

The men, keeping watch day and night against possible air raids, often stand waist-deep in mud. There is great need of canteens where they can get magazines, games, hot chocolate, cigarettes and first aid. Canteen committees have been organized both in France and in this country. Mrs. Larz Anderson, of Washington, who is American chairman, was hostess at the organization meeting of the Washington Canteen Committee ten days ago. Already enough money has been contributed for the first canteen and to assure the establishment of the second.

The Washington committee, of which Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch is chairman, will meet tomorrow morning at the Grafton Hotel. Others serving with Mrs. Gasch are Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. James T. Watson, president of the local branch of the League of American Pen Women; Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs, Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, Mrs. L. W. Tilton, Mrs. Rose Robinson Cohen, Mme. Felian Garzia, herself a native of France; Mrs. William Walter Smith and Mrs. Adelle Stiles.

MANUSCRIPTS DUE—Manuscripts for the short story contest are due tonight at the meeting of the Writers League in Thompson School.

PI BETA PHI ELECTS—Mrs. R. H. Pledger has been elected president of the Phi Beta Phi Alumnae, largest of the national Greek letter societies in Washington. She succeeds Mrs. James Greear, who has been named alternate to Mrs. George Ober, the new Panhellenic delegate.

Other new officers are Mrs. C. P. Trusell, vice president; Mrs. Wilbur Eccleston, recording secretary; Mrs. Jonathan Hauck, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frances Brown, treasurer, and Mrs. Wilford Taylor, registrar.

SOUTHWARD BOUND—Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Council of Church Women, with Mr. Linzel has left for a motor trip to Florida, where they will visit their daughter, Peggy, a student at Stetson University, in DeLand.

"MONROE DOCTRINE"—The District Society of the Daughters of 1812 will be addressed at their meeting tomorrow afternoon by Laurence Gouveneur Hoes, great-great-grandson of President James Monroe, who will discuss the Monroe Doctrine.

Mrs. Joseph W. Byrnes, of Tennessee, will be guest of honor at the meeting at which Mrs. Lane Schofield, the president, will preside. Mrs. Albion W. Tuck will be hostess at the social hour and tea. The session will be at national headquarters on Rhode Island avenue.

FOR FINNISH RELIEF—Conclusion of the Russo-Finnish peace agreement will not dampen the ardor of those who have undertaken to sponsor benefits for Finnish relief. They know the relief is still needed and will be for months to come.

One of the groups giving a benefit is the Imps Club, composed largely of the officers of Willow Grove of the Woodmen Circle. The club will sponsor a silver tea Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6:30 in the ballroom of the Roosevelt Hotel. Mrs. Pauline L. Rhors, prominent in the Woodmen Circle in the District and Maryland and a member of the Finnish relief committee, will assist Mrs. Virginia Clark, the chairman.

Music for the tea will be provided by Gwendolyn Clark and Mrs. Florence Dawson.

Mrs. Butler Ends Speaking Classes

Mrs. George Patton, wife of the commandant at Fort Myer, and Mrs. Ernest Gruening, wife of the Governor of Alaska, were guests of honor at the final session of Mrs. Hugh Butler's Wednesday morning class in public speaking which has been meeting since January at the Church House of the All Souls' Church. The class met at a luncheon at Pierce's.

Mrs. John Donaldson, chairman of the international relations committee of the A. A. U. W., was toastmistress. Mrs. Patton spoke briefly on "How Army Wives Help Their Husbands," and Mrs. Gruening responded to a greeting from the toastmistress.

After the luncheon, speeches were made by the members of the class, after which a vote was taken for the one who has improved the most and the one who is the best speaker. First and second prizes were presented by Mrs. Butler.

Mrs. R. S. Bristol won the first prize as the one who improved the most, with Mrs. Emery S. Adams, Mrs. N. H. Gravely and Mrs. J. Bartlett Richards as runners-up.

Mrs. Walter Maloney won the second prize as the best speaker, with Mrs. John Donaldson and Mrs. Xavier Vigeart as runners-up.

Women Told Of Improved Job Status

Miss Christman And Mrs. D. C. Coyle Address Luncheon

"Trends for Women In Industry" was discussed yesterday by Miss Elizabeth Christian, of the Women's National Trade Union league, and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations, at a luncheon of the department of government and the legal status of women, of the District of Columbia Voteless League of Women Voters. About 35 attended the affair at the clubhouse of the A. A. U. W. with Mrs. Pearl B. Klein, chairman, presiding.

Miss Christman credited the almost forgotten NRA with a great contribution to industry. Through its administration, many weak points were revealed in American industry, she said, which have since been corrected—among them the practice of paying men higher wages than women for the same work.

Today there are 30,000 women shirtmakers, she said, who, through the efforts of unions, following NRA investigations, are paid the same wages as men for equal work. There are 200,000 women in the laundry industry, which has now signed a new contract, guaranteeing 11 months' work and a week's vacation with pay, annually. There are 55,000 women in the steel industry, she said, 10,000 of whom are covered by union contracts.

The textile industry has seen great improvement through unionization, she said. Where a woman worker was formerly obliged to pay, from her small wage for any accidental breakage to her machine, the company now stands the repairs and provides the needles. The pay for piece work also has been increased.

Mrs. Coyle discussed women in professional fields, especially in professions considered unusual for women, such as architecture, engineering, technical work in aeronautics and so forth.

Women are learning to meet situations as they arise, said Mrs. Coyle, as men have done for generations. They have also learned that, to compete with men in what have heretofore been considered exclusively men's fields, they must be just a little bit better than their masculine colleagues. Women need no longer fear to enter any new field, she declared, for those who have succeeded in other professions, new to women, have paved the way.

Domestic Drama in Polka Dots

The spottier the fashion this year, the better. Polka dots are the smartest way of expressing optical illusions, and here is a graphic illustration, taken at a local store's fashion promenade staged by Jean Abbey, radio commentator. Miss Abbey pointed out the optical illusion that pin or confetti sized dots give to almost every figure type. The hood of this rayon crepe housecoat is lined in sky blue crepe and is zippered for quick comfort. Beneath the robe is a sky-blue gown with flattering halter neckline and front pleats in the supple skirt. The fabric is Van Raalte's sinuous petal-skin rayon, wrinkle-proof

Mary Haworth's Mail

How Tactfully Broach Subject of Reparation to Guests Who Damaged Host's Car During Visit?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps you can help us out of an embarrassing situation. Last summer my daughter graduated, and as a graduation gift her aunt invited her for a two months' visit at her home in a neighboring State. Due to circumstances both there and at home, she is still there, and during her stay has been home many times over week-ends, coming with some very nice boys she has met there.

Several weeks ago I was called to that city by the serious illness of my mother. Returning home, I was again called back. On my first visit, one of my daughter's boy friends offered to drive me home the next time I came. (To clarify my story, let's call him Don.) When I was ready to leave, my daughter and Don asked another boy (let's call him John) to come along. They agreed among themselves to use John's car, not Don's.

We arrived home safely and after dinner the young people assembled a party of six to drive into Washington. As they didn't know the route, my son offered to lead the way in his car, the others following. En route, my son stopped short at a traffic light, and John's car crashed into his from the rear, doing quite a bit of damage due to wet streets and bad brakes.

Neither then nor later did either of the visiting young men apologize to my son for what happened, or offer to pay the cost of repairs. Since the young men had been kind enough to drive me home, my son and others in the family feel that we should not be the ones to broach the subject—so you can see it is a very embarrassing situation.

My son had been unemployed for 16 months before finding a part-time job only recently. My husband has worked only three months during the last two years. So you see we are not financially able to carry the loss. And while I was their guest en route to my home, I was out of the picture when the accident occurred. Also, while these boys have visited us many times during the last nine months, they have never spent one cent except for their own pleasure while here. Under the circumstances, what action do you advise us to take?

DISTRESSED.

Better Face Fact That Fate Shortchanged You

DEAR DISTRESSED: Needless to say, I am no specialist in adjudicating this type of difficulty—but it seems to me that while the visiting young men were remiss (1) in failing to apologize; (2) in neglecting to make some gesture toward financial reparation, and (3) in driving a car with bad brakes—nevertheless your son was also remiss in operating a car that lacked "insurance coverage" against damages of this sort.

It might be said that if he cannot afford to "carry" automobile insurance, he can scarce afford to own and operate a motor vehicle—since every car on the streets is an almost irresistible target, sooner or later, for a minor or major collision, and the blame for the accident is often difficult to "fix." Usually a smash-up is the net result of what we might call a spontaneous combustion of unfortunate, unpredictable and unavoidable circumstances.

The fact that none of the family can afford to repair your son's car suggests to me that none of you is in the car-owning class, financially speaking. The accident might even be construed as a salutary reminder of that fact; a kind of warning to you to put the car away, or dispose of it altogether, until your income is more ample and stable.

If you were to attempt to "collect" from the visiting young men, undoubtedly you would be spoiling your daughter's popularity rating in her aunt's community, where, it seems, she is obliged to live indefinitely. Her stock with these young men probably would drop to zero, and when and if they began to give her the cold shoulder, all their familiar associates probably would do likewise. So do you think it is worth it? I say it isn't. I think you will just have to face the fact that fate handed you a lemon in the way of a bargain when it dealt out that alleged "free ride" home.

M. H.

Only 'Fast' Youngsters Drink and 'Neck'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I suppose you will receive many comments on your reply of March 10 to "Old Fashioned Mother," whose 17-year-old daughter thinks herself abused in having to be home by 1:30 a. m. after "ordinary dates" and by 2:30 o'clock after "formal dances." Since she has posed a question of vital importance to every teen-age girl, I feel it is up to such girls to give their opinions on the subject.

I am nearly 18 years old and a junior in high school. I have been on the "dating lists" of various boys since I was 14; and until I was nearly 16 I never went out unchaperoned. For the last two years, however, I have been dating boys my own age without any other company.

After "ordinary dates" I still shake in my shoes if I arrive home after 12:30 a. m. The preferred hour for "checking in" is 12 o'clock midnight—the hour set by you, Miss Haworth, as an appropriate "curfew" for high school boys and girls after "ordinary dates."

I am not allowed to leave home after 8:30 p. m. without special permission from my parents. After a "formal dance" there is no time limit forgetting home, but I can imagine the results if I wandered in after 2:30 a. m.! When double-dating with my elder sister, however, I may stay out until 3 o'clock on special occasions.

As for the question drinking and necking, toward which "Old Fashioned Mother" tries to take a "liberal view"—I wish to say that among high school students it is only the "fast crowd" that goes in for either practice. Far from being an "Old Fashioned Mother," this woman is almost too generous and considerate with her daughter, in my opinion.

Some young people may feel sorry for me because of the rules to which I subscribe. But I consider myself fortunate in that I am fairly good looking and popular, getting my share (and no more) of good times and attentions. And while I may sometimes wish for more freedom, on the other hand, what is there for a girl to do after 1 o'clock? I have never found any (healthy) amusement places that stayed open after that hour. I think "Old Fashioned Mother" must be a pretty grand sort of person.

Ann Sheridan Has Controversy With Harvard

New York, March 13.

THE BRIEF skirmish which has been waging between Miss Ann Sheridan of the movies, better known in the picture mags as The Humph Girl, and the Lampoon of Harvard University, has given us all a chance for a bit of amused thought.

That historic humorous magazine of John Harvard's somewhat hallowed foundation concerned itself with the movies the other day—a subject most of us consider beneath the notice of the erudite young gentlemen of Cambridge. It wound up its consideration of our mightiest form of mass entertainment by picking on Annie Sheridan, calling her the "actress most unlikely to succeed."

This made pretty Annie pretty mad, and she or her corps of inspired press agents came back with some very nasty cracks at the Harvards, wondering audibly what those fellers mean by success, adding that she is now collecting about $100,000 a year, while a recent graduate of Harvard is wiping windshields at a filling station.

This I consider slightly below the belt, as the fellow in question may have been a bit weak on math, and may not possess a pretty picture profile, or the heavenly body, astronomically speaking, enjoyed by Annie. She also remarks, in a low snarl, that she once met a Harvard man and had a pretty dull evening. But on this score you can't indict a whole university. I have always heard that some of those school-conscious lads are rather hot items.

We all remember the stupendous blast of picture publicity that Miss Ann received a year ago—picture on the cover of three noted magazines simultaneously was its high spot. Annie is a very tasty girl, but her artistic progress couldn't keep step with her publicity, which was very fine but slightly premature.

ANN SHERIDAN

Resents Criticism Of Her Ability In College Paper

As predicted here, Tony Luhan, the Taos Indian spouse of Mabel Dodge Luhan, writer and salon-keeper, left in a hurry for New Mexico the other day, denouncing the noisy riveters of our city. A few days later Mabel, who has been holding feasts of reason in her Fifh avenue apartment, packed up and followed. So the Luhans will again be at peace at their beautiful ranch house near Taos.

Among the ailing—The prettiest customer at our Lenox Hill Hospital has been little Mitzi Green, kid movie star who has grown into a musical comedy beauty. She just got rid of a pesky appendix.

Diana Barrymore, lovely and lively daughter of the Great former Profile, just had a birthday party, with hilarious didoes by all present, funny and phony presents, and all that jocosity. Her pappy was not on hand, of course, since the shindig was held at the apartment of her mother, now Mrs. Harrison Tweed. Incidentally, the memoirs of that beautiful lady are now appearing in a slick magazine, and make right bright reading.

Cherry Tarts Make Colorful, Appealing Dessert

CHERRY tarts need not wait for a summer's day to be made. They are appropriate at any time for luncheon, dinner, afternoon bridge or evening buffet. I am giving a recipe for making these tarts, sent me by Mrs. Pauline Crow, 1910 T street southeast.

Cherry Chiffon Tarts

Remove pits from 2 cups cooked or canned sour cherries and cut in small pieces. Place a suacepan with ¾ cup cherry juice and 3 tablespoons lemon juice over low heat. Combine ½ cup of sugar, 2 egg yolks and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add to the cherries and cook until eggs are set, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, add 1 tablespoon gelatin dissolved in ¼ cup cold water and stir until dissolved. Let cool until mixture begins to stiffen. Add ½ cup sugar to 2 stiffly beaten egg whites and fold into the cherry mixture. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Fill tarts. Chill. Garnish with whipped cream.

"Miss Pettifogg, I want you to meet my guest, Mrs. Topper—Mrs. Farthingale Topper. Of course you've heard of her husband. This is Patricia Pettifogg, Mrs. Topper. You've heard of Lucellus Pettifogg, of course—who invented the fluted nut cup? . . . Well, this is his sister.

"Oh, how do you do, Mme. Rutabaga! . . . Of course you know Mrs. Topper—oh, I just supposed everybody knew Mrs. Farthingale Topper. Mme. Rutabaga is a very famous person, Mrs. Topper. She's just written a book on Abyssinian termites . . . Say, isn't that Princess Vermicelli over there? . . . That exotic-looking woman in the harem veil? . . . Who? . . Oh, not Mabel Puffer Bounce . . The one on the radio that does the Aunt Sade? . . Oh, I'm dying to get her autograph! Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Tinkerton?

"Of course you know Mrs. Topper—Mrs. Farthingale Topper? . . . This is Elsie Ripple Tinkerton, Mrs. Topper—you know the famous novelist—what? . . . Oh, I beg pardon! Of course I mean pianist . . . What? . . . Oh, yes, do join us Mrs. Tinkerton. We were looking for Princess Vermicelli . . . Who? . . . No, not Fredericka Fondant! . . . The one who wrote "The Love Rebel." Oh, we must find her!

"How do you do, Mrs. Bigwigger? . . . Of course you know Mrs. Topper. And this is Fredericka Fondant—I mean Elsie Ripple Tinkerton. I always get writers mixed up. Though, of course, Mrs. Tinkerton is really a sculptress.

"Yes, do join us, Mrs. Bigwigger . . . How do you do, Mme. Gazeebo? . . . Of course you know Mrs. Farthingale Bigwigger—I mean Mrs. Motimer Bigwigger . . . and this is Mrs. Tinkerton, the famous poetess, and this is Mrs. Farthingale Topper. Now her husband—Oh, beg pardon, Mrs. Macaroon! I thought you were Mrs. Topper.

"Do you all know Mrs. Smith Macaroon? Now her husband—Oh, I'm sorry! I forgot! . . . Well, anyway Mrs. Macaroon does very lovely batik work. And Mme. Gazeebo has just done a perfectly fascinating translation of something in Sanskrit."

"Oh, now we've lost Mrs. Topper . . . She'll never forgive me! . . . Now if you'll all just wait here until I find Mrs. Topper—Oh, there she is! . . . Oh, Mrs. Topper, I'm so sorry! . . . Oh, you did! . . . Not the one who makes all those darling little lapel gadgets? . . . Oh, say, everybody! Mrs. Topper has just met the wife of the man who makes all those cunning these lapel do-dads!

"Say, now where is Mrs. Bigwigger? I'm afraid she'll think I forgot her! Oh, there she goes! Mrs. Macaroon—I mean Mrs. Bigwigger! Wait! We're coming!

"How do you do, Countess Caliope? . . . Oh, no! not the Princess Vermicelli! . . . I'd be thrilled to death! . . . Oh, how do you do, Princess Vermicelli? . . . May I present Mrs. Bigwigger Topper—she does perfectly lovely batik work . . . and this is Mrs. Farthingale Tinkerton, the famous cellist, and Mme. Macaroon Gazeebo—now her husband—well anyway these are all very famous persons."

Movies Have Etiquette Code

By the Associated Press

No matter how small your hat, it is always best to remove it at the movies. Usually women wearing large-brimmed hats do take them off. Even a turban can be a nuisance to the person behind you. And those bunny bows are enough to shut off the view of the screen for several persons.

You go to the movies for fun; you should be willing to help make it more fun for others. The ushers try to give you the best available seats, so why not sit where they show you instead of arguing.

Don't rattle papers. People nearby came to get their amusement from the show, not from your candy crunching.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

BULGES seem to be entirely independent of the total weight. Certain measurements are favorite parking spots for the pounds regardless of whether or not the pounds are extra. Usually these measurements are the waist, hips and thighs but sometimes this portion of the figure appears too hefty because the chest and shoulders look thin by contrast.

You can do whatever you like with your figure, provided you know the right exercises—and follow them! First, check the three pivotal measurements—bust, waist and hips.

As soon as you know which measurements you want to slim down or build up, go to work on them. Suppose you want to develop the chest; then exercise with the arms held at shoulder level. Backward arm-swinging with the arms at this level is excellent. But milder exercises also are effective. Try this one:

Clench the right fist and place it in the left hand. Have both elbows flexed and the hands chest-level. Resisting with the left hand, push with the right. Move the hands to the extreme left in front of the body, then pushing with left hand and resisting with right, back to the extreme right. Repeat for five counts and clench the left fist, placing it in the right hand to continue the exercise for five counts.

Done correctly, bending can wrench inches off the waistline and flatten the tummy. But whenever you bend, be sure first to pull up with the lower abdominal muscles. Here is a good workout for the trunk muscles:

Sit on the floor with the legs straight on floor and spread as wide apart as possible. Pull up with the lower abdominal muscles and stretch the arms overhead, clapping the hands. Keep the arms pressed against the ears throughout the exercise. Bend acutely to the right and try to touch clasped hands to the right ankle. Stretch up again, and bend to left. Sideward bending and stretching exercises of all kinds are the best bet for trimming down the waist.

Rope skipping is grand for the circulation when done vigorously, as demonstrated by Jane Froman, radio songbird

Leg-swinging tightens the musculature of both hips and thighs, giving slimmer lines. To reduce the hips kick backward, swinging the leg from the hip to an angle of 45 degrees in back. The big fleshy muscle on the back of the hip is also brought into action in rotation of the leg from the hip joint. Stand erect with weight balanced on left foot, and hold the right leg straight out in front, about 12 inches from the floor. Try to keep it at that same distance from the floor as you circle the leg around to the side, then to the back. Return to starting position and repeat.

MR. AND MRS. NORMAN KEITH

Mrs. Luke, Norman Keith Are Married

Reception on Steamer Precedes Honeymoon Cruise to Havana

At a quiet ceremony in New, Mrs. Marian Worthington Luke yesterday became the bride of Norman Keith in the Central Presbyterian Church at Park avenue and Sixty-fourth street. Mrs. Ralph Worthington, of Washington and River Farm, in nearby Maryland, mother of the bride, was among the members of the immediate families present.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and bridegroom visited the Chapel at St. Bartholemew in New York, where the Episcopal blessing was administered by the Rev. G. P. Sargent. From there the wedding party adjourned to the S. S. Orienta for a small reception prior to the departure of the newlyweds for Havana.

En route to Philadelphia, where Mr. and Mrs. Keith will make their home, they will stop in Georgia for a visit with Mrs. Keith's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Coad, jr., who recently remodeled a plantation there.

Mrs. Keith made her debut here several years ago and was a popular member of the younger set.

Mr. Keith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lynwood Keith, of Rutland, Vt.

Word from Nassau, that lovely British island to which Americans are flocking to get warm and swim in the surf, says that Mr. and Mrs. Henry McHarg, jr., of Washington, have arrived aboard their yacht Estherbelle and are anchored off the quay of the British Colonial Hotel. They have been on a cruise to Exuma Keys.

Mrs. Richard Hutchison and Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchison, of Washington, are registered at the British Colonial and are frequent guests at the luncheon parties given in the hotel's Coconut Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., who are in Nassau after a vacation in Palm Beach, and Harry Villard, of the State Department, were among the guests at a cocktail party given recently by L. H. Vullings, of Washington.

Vincent Astor's palatial yacht, Nourmahal, arrived in Nassau Harbor this week. Among those on board beside Mr. Astor were his brother-in-law, Prince Serge Obolensky, Mrs. Potter Bourne, Mrs. Rhoda Cameron Clark, Miss Mary Cushing, Nino Lo Savio and Charles Pence.

Several Parties Crowd Capital Social Calendar

Frank Ashton-Gwatkin, Prof. Charles Rist Are Guests of Honor at Tea Given By Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady

WITH THE ACCENT on informality, several parties spotlighted the calendar yesterday afternoon, keeping society on the go. Those two gentlemen, Frank Ashton-Gwatkin and Prof. Charles Rist, who have been heralded as "appeasement" visitors to this country, were guests of honor at the tea given by the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady in their apartment at the Highlands. Meanwhile, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle gathered in 100 guests for a cocktail party in honor of William H. Hornibrook, American Minister to Costa Rica, and Mrs. Hornibrook.

Definitely a ladies' party was the "at home" given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Francis Biddle in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue. Les femmes shone again at the small gathering at which Mrs. Edwin Watson entertained for a few members of the press. Mrs. Watson will appear as soloist April 2 with the philadelphia Orchestra here, playing Saint Saens' piano concerto in G Minor.

An informal gathering was the Grady party. Prof. Rist, who is adviser to the French blockade ministry, is stopping at the French Embassy. Mr. Ashton-Gwatkin, who occupies a similar post in the British blockade ministry, is a houseguest at the British Embassy. At both embassies it was stated that the visitors would be here for an

Mrs. Grady received her guests, wearing a turquoise gown, floor length, and a corsage of orchids. Guests at the Grady party during the afternoon included the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian; the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin; the Canadian Minister, Loring Christie; the Australian Minister, Richard G. Casey; Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Senator and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, Eugene Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn and Mr. and Mrs. Willard Kiplinger. Interesting guests were Mr. and Mrs. Max Roesti, of Berlin, who are old friends of Mr. and Mrs. Grady. Mr. Roesti is an internationally known banker.

Mrs. Biddle Has 'at Home'

Dropping in for a brief chat with Mrs. Francis Biddle at the second of her series of "at homes," guests were delighted to find space to breathe—a rare thing at an "at home." Mrs. Biddle always asks just enough guests to fill comfortably her not-too-large apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Assisting Mrs. Biddle were Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap and Miss Harriet Winslow. Mrs. Biddle will leave today for Philadelphia where one of her poems will be presented on the program to be given at the Players Theater this evening. She will return to Washington tomorrow and will leave again Saturday for New York City. Mrs. Biddle will be in that city in order to attend a tea to be given by her sister, Miss Cornelia Van A. Chapin, on Sunday. The party will be given in the Murray Hill Studio of Miss Chapin, who is a noted sculptress.

Mme. Hurban Among Guests

Chatting with the hostess on the subject of travel was the Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, who was one of the few men at Mrs. Biddle's party. Mrs. Biddle wore a wide pleated ruff about her tea-length black frock.

Sprightly yellow daffodils and pink carnations centered the tea table. Mme. Hurban, wearing a black and white suit, sipped tea and talked with Mrs. Munroe Johnson. A huge white water lily adorned Mrs. Johnson's outfit. Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry and Mrs. Warren Austin arrived together. A cluster of bright pink flowers formed Mrs. Gerry's hat. Mrs. Adolf Berle wore a heavy silver necklace over her gown. Others there included Mrs. Thomas McAllister, Mrs. Benjamin Hill and her daughter, Miss Cynthia Hill, and Mrs. Edward Fraley, of Philadelphia.

Filled with forsythia and yellow lilies, the Nicaraguan Legation was the scene of a gay cocktail party yesterday when the Minister and Senora de De Bayle entertained for Mr. and Mrs. William Hornibrook, who will return to Costa Rica shortly, where Mr. Hornibrook is American Minister.

Senora de De Bayle Smartly Gowned in Green

Senora de De Bayle wore a smart green faille swallow-tail jacket over her black gown. A large cluster of orchids completed the costume. Mrs. Hornibrook wore a chic navy and white ensemble.

Guests included Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, who wore a silver fox jacket over her black ensemble; the Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Munilla, the Commercial Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, she in a chartreuse and black ensemble; Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes, and many others.

Couple Wed At Warrenton

A surprise to their friends was the wedding on Sunday afternoon in Warrenton, Va., of Miss Helen Elizabeth Turner to Andrew M. Robinson. The ceremony took place at the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. E. A. Smyth officiating.

The bride wore a tailored ensemble of dusty rose with powder blue accessories and a corsage of roses and sweetpeas. Miss Sylvia Callahan was her only attendant and A. M. Warden was best man.

Included in the wedding party were Mrs. L. A. Turner, of Manchester, N. H., mother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hertherington, Ray Bossidy, Miss Florence Tillman, Miss Jessie Crusoe and Stephen F. Tillman.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Minister and Mme. Fotitch Entertain Mia Slavenska and Others From Ballet

A REAL GLAMOUR girl, Yugoslav style, is Mia Slavenska, the ballerina for whom the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch entertained following her appearance with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo on Tuesday night. Mlle. Slavenska arrived at the legation looking just the way a dancer should—wearing a black velvet dress with a tight fitting skirt of silver lame and with her reddish gold hair peeping from beneath a turban of silver cloth.

The attractive artiste, who starred in the French film "Ballerina," sat at a table with Dr. Hans Kindler, director of the National Symphony Orchestra. She ate hardly anything, which surprised those who had heard of Kirsten Flagstad's pint of champagne after every performance and seen the Polish pianist, Artur Rubenstein, forge through three plates of salad at the party given for him after his concert here last month.

LEONIDE MASSINE, who danced magnificently the part of the Peruvian in the "Gaities Parisiennes" number, with its famous can can, and several other artists, accompanied Mlle. Slavenska to the party. M. Massine chatted for a while with Mrs. George A. Garrett, whose smart black dress had a bodice of white chiffon.

With Dr. Kindler present, talk centered about the current impasse between the musicians of the orchestra and the Symphony Association, who say the orchestra will have to disband if the musicians won't withdraw their demands for higher salaries. After talking about the difficulties with Dr. Kindler, Mrs. Walter Louchheim dashed up to Mlle. Slavenska to ask for her autograph for her little daughter, who is studying dancing and attended the performance that evening.

Mme. Fotitch wore a becoming dress of fuschia crepe with flowers on the shoulder.

Mrs. Tracy Dows, in gray chiffon, and Mrs. Truxtun Beale sat together. Harbingers of a spring which it seems will never quite arrive were Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat and Miss Irene Boyle, who wore bright colored prints.

MRS. FOULKE DEWEY and Jacques Truelle arrived together, the former wearing a champagne colored frock with a pleated skirt and a magnificent silver fox cape. Mrs. Frank Simonds was accompanied by her son, James. Others present included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Miss Diana Rowland, whose dress was topped by a military looking red wool jacket embroidered in gold; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Col. Rene Weiser and M. and Mme. Charles Lucet.

ONE OF THE GUESTS, whom we will call Smith, was asked by a diplomat on arriving, "Vous etes nouveau venu?" "No," he replied immediately, "my name's Smith."

ELISE HILL, daughter of the very popular Mrs. Hiram Bingham, and Alexander Phillips, of New York, will be extensively entertained before their marriage April 6. Clarence Hewes has sent out invitations for a dinner in their honor on Thursday, April 4. Mr. Hewes will entertain on March 28 for Robert P. Skinner, former Ambassador to Turkey, and Mrs. Skinner. Mr. Hewes served with him when Mr. Skinner was Minister to Latvia.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

THE FOLLOWING little anecdote about the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, is told by a Latin-American dignitary who, with his wife, visited the United States last year.

Mr. Welles took the distinguished visitors, whom I shall call Senor and Senora X, to see the World's Fair. Of course they met Mayor LaGuardia, Grover Whalen, and numerous other important people and were toasted by them and drank toasts to them in all the best vintages the fair had to offer.

Mr. Welles, an abstemious man and a diplomat to the core, sipped politely here and there merely as an amiable gesture.

On leaving the fair grounds Senor and Senora X, and Mr. Welles all climbed into the back seat of their car. The day was hot and the car seemed a bit crowded.

Senora X, mindful of the comfort of her host, moved over toward her husband in order to give Mr. Welles as much room as possible. Her English was sketchy so she just smiled at him brightly.

Suddenly the words came to her and she said, "Mr. Welles, are you tight?"

Mr. Welles' dignity was unruffled. He replied suavely, "Not quite, madame, not quite."

My guess is that, like George Washington, he couldn't tell a lie and that like a true diplomat he wouldn't contradict a lady.

MR. AND MRS. SNOWDEN FAHNESTOCK have returned from a vacation in Nassau and are spending a few days in New York before the spring holidays for schools begin. Mrs. Fahnestock will have her son, Jimmie Tuck, down from St. Mark's to spend Easter.

MRS. HERBERT SEYMOUR HOWARD, with Seymour Howard, jr., and pretty daughter, Maisie, who was one of last year's most popular debutantes, spent last week-end in Washington seeing some of their old friends. The Howards are now living at Haverford, Pa., as Capt. Howard is stationed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. It was so nice to see them again and to learn that young Seymour plans to stay in Washington and follow the profession of architect.

THE POPULAR First Secretary of the Cuban Embassy, Roberto de Mendoza, will leave on Friday for a two month's vacation in Cuba. Coming home the other night with pious plans to devote the evening to packing he found himself locked out of the house. The maid had gone home with her key and was not to be found. His own key was on the keychain in his car and the car was in some workshop, address unknown being put in readiness for the trip. The result was that the Shoreham had one extra unexpected guest that night and no packing was done by Roberto.

CHATTING WITH charming Lady Maureen Noel, we learned that she and Barbara Weiss, who works for the British Embassy, were planning a children's party to take place at John Foster's house last Sunday afternoon. When questioned about the arrangements, the inimitable Mr. Foster replied, "No supper; just everything to make them sick." Incidentally, this novel way of complimenting the parents for their hospitality also made a tremendous hit with the future debs and beaux of 6 and 7.

Ouster by Congress of Brownrigg and Huff Creates Mix-up at Department of Justice

By Edward Ryan

Removal of William Brownrigg, Justice Department personnel officer, and his assistant, Warren M. Huff, yesterday left the agency's personnel program in a tangle, officials said.

They pointed out that it was removal by action of Congress rather than by Attorney General Robert Jackson.

Brownrigg and Huff were brought to the department from Michigan last spring when former Attorney General Murphy undertook enlargement of the department's personnel program in line with moves to improve the civil service system. Congressional committees, however, questioned the legality of their appointment and struck out an $11,000 item for their salaries.

Brownrigg, who left a $7,500-a-year job as director of civil service in Michigan, and took the Government post at $6,500, said yesterday he had not planned what to do, except that he will remain in Washington for a while. He came into the department with top rating in a civil service examination for some 6,000 personnel men.

To solve the department's personnel mixup, wherein several officials take part in handling employe matters, Attorney General Jackson is having a study made on how to centralize direction of personnel policies.

Justice Department officials said that the removal of Brownrigg and Huff had no connection with the fact that they were both from Michigan and appointed by an Attorney General from the same State. The Department's oganization, it was pointed out, has carried over from Murphy to Jackson with but two changes in top-ranking jobs.

Ogo Carusi was brought back from Tax Division, to be personal assistant to the Attorney General, a job he has held under four Attorneys General. Gordon Dean returned from the Antitrust Division to resume his former post of public relations officer.

Key Government economists are about ready to roll up their sleeves and go after the argument that America's unemployment is nearer 2,000,000 than 10,000,000, it was learned last night.

They are debating whether to join in the running argument between columnists Ernest Lindley and Dorothy Thompson, in The Post, and Arthur Krock, in the Times. Lindley said yesterday a figure near 10,000,000 is corect, while the others have suggested estimates between 2,000,000 and 4,000,000.

What has the Government statistical experts hot is the suggestion that someone has been playing politics with statistics. It was reported that they had advised top-ranking Government officials against answering the argument for the lower estimate, on the ground that it was not logical or rooted in fact, but now that the hint of politics in statistics has been raised they are about ready to change their advice.

Do You Know What's Going On?

Russian-Finn Peace Proposal Was Reported First in The Post

On Thursday, March 7, five days before the peace treaty between Finland and the Soviet was signed, The Washington Post carried a front-page dispatch from Stockholm stating that Russia's terms for ending the war had been sumitted to Helsinki and were being considered.

No other Washington newspaper had this important news.

It was another scoop for The Post . . . made possible because The Post has more sources of news than any other Washington paper. This particular news came from the New York Times service. In other instances, other news services have obtained the news first—but with FIVE services The Post gets the story whichever service it comes from.

Again Post readers learned first what was going on.

To get all the news—complete, fast and reliable—you must read The Post.

A-painting the sky with a blue-daubed brush;
And Molly the Moth's having so much fun,
Working away to polish the sun;
Those two snow-white doves have been busy all day,
Sweeping the Winter clouds away;
Freddie the Frog's been busy for hours,
Gathering rain for April showers;
Two brilliant butterflies, flapping away
Are hanging a rainbow—you'll see it some day;
Jack's lazy bunnies, with plenty to do,
Prefer wasting time playing peek-a-boo;
While Beau Brummel—his real name's Grasshopper
Goes gayly along, tipping his Easter topper.

Dizzy Dean Accepts Terms With Chicago Cubs

The Washington Post Sports

Harris Showing Keen Interest in Jim Dean

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 13.—Clark Griffith has always been known as a shrewd operator in baseball, but that fact will again be emphasized on April 16 when the 1940 edition of the Nats is unveiled. That team is expected to be the finest Washington club since the pennant winning group of 1933. And where did Griffith get it?

POVICH

The whole kit and kaboodle of 'em—the nine Washington players who will take the field on opening day—were fetched to the Nats by Griffith for a cash outlay of only $69,311, unless our arithmetic fails us. If you're curious about those odd eleven bucks, they represent the cost of one Griffith's brightest stars—Buddy Lewis. Griffith got him for train fare from Gastonia, N. C., to Chattanooga.

It's a home-bred Washington team except for one outfielder and two infielders, and it ought to quiet all jibes at the much-maligned Washington farm system. The center and right fielders, the third baseman, the second baseman and the catcher—if the latter is Jake Early—all came out of the Nats' minor league grist mill.

More than half of the cash outlay made by Griffith for his 1940 ball club is personified by young Jimmy Pofahl, the rookie shortstop from Minneapolis. Griffith felt impelled to separate himself from $35,000 in cash and players for Pofahl.

Paradoxically, the only other high-priced purchase on the 1940 team is another young fellow who, like Pofahl, is still strictly on trial. He's Jimmy Wasdell, the chunky first baseman who cost Griffith $20,000.

Griffith's best ball players came cheaply. Third Baseman Cecil Travis, whom the Nats' owner could peddle for $100,000 at the slightest notice that he was in a selling mood, set the Washington clubowner back only $300. That was the price Scout Joe Engel paid for the gangling Travis seven years ago when the Georgia boy was a mere bushwhacker in the baseball school of old Kid Elberfeld.

In the case of Buddy Lewis, the Nats were steeped in good luck. By his play for an American Legion Junior team which he captained into the national finals, Lewis won an honorary tryout with the New York Giants six years ago. And it was honorary. Manager Bill Terry took no notice of the frail Carolina boy who sat on the Giants' bench for most of a month and Lewis quit New York heartsick.

Back in his Gastonia home he wearied of clerking in a textile broker's office and posted a letter to Joe Engel, Chattanooga president, asking a tryout. Engel sent him the $11 railroad fare and that's how Buddy Lewis came into the Washington farm system. In 1938, American League managers voted Lewis the league's all-star third baseman.

Washington last season came up with the champion base stealer of the league who developed the added virtue of being a .300 hitter and a very tolerable center fielder. Where did the Nats get George Case? They plucked him off the Trenton sandlots after Connie Mack had turned him down as a pitcher, and within two years he blossomed as an invaluable chattel of the Nats.

A rugged young Florida lad came along last season to perform something of a feat. He took Washington's regular second base job away from the veteran Buddy Myer. How much did Jimmy Bloodworth cost Clark Griffith? Not a red penny. The Nats' Chattanooga farm team was training at Panama City, Fla., four years ago when Bloodworth wandered into camp, uninvited. The reason the Nats led the league in the execution of double plays last season was smart-fielding, iron-armed Jimmy Bloodworth.

Leftfielder Gerald Walker didn't come up through the Nats' farm system, but star that he is he cost the Nats only $7,500 if you want to get down to cold figures. For Walker, the Nats traded Pitcher Pete Appleton and Outfielder Taft Wright to the White Sox, and $7,500 covers the cost of that pair to the Nats. It is the amount Griffith paid when he drafted Appleton from Montreal five years ago. Wright, a farm system product, cost the Nats nothing.

There is a strong possibility that the Nats catcher on opening day will not be Rick Ferrell, but a rookie named Jake Early. Two years ago, Griffith turned down an offer of $20,000 for Early by the Red Sox. It would have represented a $20,000 profit, because Early cost the Nats nothing. He's another fellow that wandered into the Chattanooga camp at Panama City four years ago and was signed to a contract by canny Joe Engel.

Barring injury of some sort, the pitcher who will step to the mound for the Nats on April 16 against the Boston Red Sox will be Dutch Leonard, a fellow who came pretty close to being the best pitcher in the American League last season. Where did the Nats come up with this guy who last year could win 20 games and lose only 8 for a sixth-place Washington Club? The feiched him from Atlanta for the $6,500 draft price, provided him with a catcher who wasn't afraid to call for his knuckle ball—Rick Ferrell—and discovered that they had pulled a tremendous prize out of baseball's grab-bag.

Moundsman Impresses With Style

Won 21 Games in Florida League Last Year; Likes to Clown When Hurling

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., March 13.—The 6-foot-5-inch pitcher figure of Rookie Jim Dean is occasioning profound interest on the part of Manager Bucky Harris, who wonders whether the Nats have come up with an eccentric young star or merely an eccentric.

Dean is the gangling right-hander who came to the Nats as the minor consideration in the deal that also swung Pitcher Sid Hudson to the Washington club in exchange for $12,000 paid the Sanford team, of the Florida State League.

He is the antithesis of the serious, sober Hudson, given to grandstanding-it before the fans and laughing in the batter's faces, but Harris is in a mood to forgive all of his showiness if he can pitch, and the Nats manager is nursing the idea that the big fellow can be a big-league pitcher.

"I've only seen him lobbing the ball for a few days, but when he rears back out there on the mound he looks like he's pitching from on top of the batter," said Harris. "I was standing up to the plate myself today and he looked as if he was sticking his big right foot in my face during his wind-up."

Record Impressive

There are a couple of other items which intrigue Harris in the matter of the gabby one's pitching talents. Dean gave Hudson a close race of it for the pitching honors in the Florida League with his 21 victories last year, and in 1938 he chained together a string of 17 consecutive wins in the same league.

"That's powerful pitching even in Class D ball," said Harris. "I can see how Dean wins ball games. He's plenty loose out there on the mound and he gets terrific leverage. I can't wait until I get a look at his fast ball and his control. I'd say right now his control is the most important factor."

There is no evidence, either, that Dean is not a smart sort of pitcher. Native Orlando fans tell of the game he pitched to start the season here last year.

"He put on a great show that day," related John Ganzel, general manager of the Washington-owned Orlando club. "They announced him as the Orlando pitcher, and he walked out to warm up before the game, kidding with the fans and telling 'em he was going to shut Orlando out.

A Cunning Pitcher

"Dean warmed up with his catcher in front of the stands and the first thing he did was to throw his first four pitches a half-dozen feet over the Catcher's head. He didn't come close to the plate.

"I told the Orlando hitters to stand up there and wait this big palooka out; that he'd probably walk everybody in the park. I changed my mind when he struck out the first three hitters to face him on nine pitched balls. Dean's wild warm-up stuff was just a cute act of his own."

Dean is signed to a Charlotte contract, but that will be no barrier, if, in the Nats' exhibition games, he is able to get his fast ball across the plate. Bucky Harris will grab him, because, as Harris says:

"We can't pass up anybody who can pitch a little bit. And this Dean may be a better pitcher right now than some of the bush leaguers I was planning to carry merely to round out a staff of ten."

Plans to Join Team Sunday In California

'Great One' Happy To Be in Fold; States Farm Work Great Conditioner

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Tex., March 13.—The great Diz Dean, strangely mellow after a wordy holdout, accepted Chicago Cub terms today and said he would join his mates Sunday in California.

Nervous as a rookie packing for his first training camp, Dean hurried in from his nearby farm and gleefully confirmed he had reached "a happy understanding" with the Cubs and was "darn glad about the whole thing."

Ol' Diz wouldn't talk of such ugly matters as contracts or specific amounts, but the feeling was that he had finally descended to Owner Phil K. Wrigley's original offer of $10,000. The big right-hander had demanded $15,000—until last night.

Then, he admitted, he telephoned Clarence Rowland, of the Cub staff, at Avalon, Calif.

"Happy to Sign"

"Very fair," said Dean of Rowland. "I'm happy to sign. We both agreed on every point and I'll be with those Cubs Sunday. We agreed not to discuss the terms or anything else about our conversation.

"Just say I'm happy and feel like I'll have a good year.

"And say, boy, that farm work has made me feel like a million. I'm way below 200 pounds and my arm is feeling swell. I'd give it a good workout between digging wells, putting up fences, getting my ground ready and getting that peach orchard started."

So, on Friday the big fellow boards a train for a trip that will put one of the finest pitching arms the game has known to its final test. The past two years have seen Dean decline steadily after throwing his arm away to get a string of victories that made him one of the best pitchers of modern times.

In Good Shape

Dean said he threw "a few over at my baseball school in Jackson, Miss," several days ago and his arm felt normal.

Never has Dean looked trimmer. He weighs about 195 pounds, is deep brown from working in the sun.

"I'm dead serious about this business," said Diz. "I've got to make it this year."

Not long ago Dean said that this was his last fling at baseball. If his arm fails to respond, he'll fall back on his farm, a palatial sort of place about eight miles from Dallas—tucked away in rolling hills.

Bethesda Five Accepts Bid to Duke Tourney

Joins Roosevelt In Southern Schoolboy Event Tomorrow

By Bill Burnett

Two, instead of an anticipated one, local schoolboy cage teams will leave Washington today with their eyes on the Southern Scholastic Basketball Tournament at Durham, N. C.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase, champion of Montgomery County, and a semi-finalist in the metropolitan tournament, cast its lot along with Roosevelt's interhigh and metropolitan champs yesterday when Principal Pyles announced a bid had been received and accepted by phone.

The suburbanites will leave at 9 a. m. in several cars. Ten players—Johnny Shumate, Bill Barnsley, Elton McClure, Duke Hashagen, Jim Kinsman, Bob Cremins, Bob Keene, "Stretch" Janof, Bob Lebling and Franny Hughes—as well as Manager Haven Mankin and Coach Allen Vogt will be in the caravan.

At 10 o'clock, after a farewell salute by the entire student body, Roosevelt's Rough Riders will leave in a special bus. Coach Herman Littman, Assistant Principal Charles E. Bish and Manager Earl Pruitt will head the exodus. The ten players to be taken will be Hymie Perlo, George West, Ernie Travis, Tom Robertson, Frank Ciango, George Robertson, Dick Goodman, Al Miller, Bob Walton and Harold Katz.

In the Durham event, Bethesda, due to the withdrawal of one of the original entries, is scheduled to encounter much more trouble than the Riders. Its first clash will be at 1 p. m. tomorrow afternoon against Lanier High, of Macon, Ga., third seeded team.

Roosevelt, seeded No. 4 among the eight clubs, will meet Harrodsburg, of Kentucky, in the first round tomorrow at 8:30 to launch hostilities. Parker High, of Greenville, S. C., and High Point come together at 10 a. m., and at 11:30 Durham, defending champion, meets Lynchburg, the Virginia titlist.

Harry Jeffra, Archibald May Be Rematched

By the Associated Press

New York, March 13.—Manager Al Weill said tonight the "chances are" Joey Archibald would defend his world featherweight championship next in Washington against Harry Jeffra, "to stop all the hullabaloo the National Boxing Association has been raising" over their bout last September.

Weill said he had offers of $8,000 and $6,000 from promoters in Baltimore and $7,500 from Providence to have Archibald fight the Baltimore boxer in those cities, and that New Orleans had bid $7,500 to have the featherweight boss put his title on line against Jimmy Perrin there.

"I also have a $7,500 offer, with a privilege of 37½ per cent of the gate, from Joe Turner to fight Jeffra in Washington," Weill added. "And Goldie Ahearn and Jimmy Erwin each have offered percentage guarantees to stage the fight in Washington."

Archibald took a close decision from Jeffra in their September 28 bout, in which Benny Leonard was the referee.

"The N. B. A., through its president, Heinie Miller," Weill added, "has said in a letter that the decision was unfair to Jeffra. The N. B. A. has inspired Representative Ambrose Kennedy to threaten a Congressional investigation of the boxing game. We'll give 'em the return match and settle it."

Turner said last night he had not been in contact with Weill since last September, when he made the original offer of $7,500 for the rematch of the bout here that attracted added notoriety due to the questionable decision. The local promoter said "the offer was $7,500 but I never mentioned a percentage of the gate, and wouldn't think of it."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Hollywood, Fla., March 13.—One of the truly colossal "busts" in sports history lies rotting here in the tropical sun. The verdant weeds of Florida are sprouting up and strangling the $1,400,000 Gulfstream Park race track. Unless the irate creditors can swing a deal whereby it will be used for trotting races the glittering layout will join Roosevelt Raceway as a titanic floperoo.

CONSIDINE

Gulfstream was born in the fertile mind of an old line promoter named Joe Smoot three or four years ago.

His pockets stuffed with options and seeing dollar sign spots before his eyes—a kind of promoterial occupation disease — Smoot dreamed of making Gulfstream a super-drooper in U. S. horse racing.

He sold stock left and right and hired as his builder Jack Horning, son of the wealthy Mrs. Marie Horning. Out of the jungle and sand dunes began to rise at astonishing speed one of those fabulous modern racing plants.

Later, the Hornings bought out Smoot's share and sank a fortune into the completion of the job. So did a lot of others.

It was Smoot's idea and Horning's hope to have Gulfstream improve the breed only at night, to lure the sportsmen up from lush Miami and Miami Beach, only 17 miles south. But, somebody overlooked the political stranglehold that Hialeah and Tropical have on Florida racing. It was out of the question, of course, to expect either of these two heavily protected tracks voluntarily to give up a chunk of their racing calendar to make way for the breed-improving to the North. Then, atop this not unexpected setback, Gulfstream was informed that a high official of the law in Florida had decided that night racing was unconstitutional.

Anyway Gulfstream opened its doors of a hot Wednesday afternoon, on February 1, 1939. The first day was a success, although the horses were a little on the glue-pot side, thanks to the heavy pressure put on important stables to keep the better nags out of the new place.

But the next day, Thursday, word must have gone out that there was a leper in the $2 mutuel window, for play fell off and on Friday and Saturday the handle was something like $80,000—which isn't enough to keep a track like Gulfstream breathing. Early Monday morning, the story goes, Harry Fink, the New York sportsman, and several of his associates took back the $45,000 bankroll they had "rented" to the track to facilitate the making of change. Fink is said to have been afraid that the unpaid ticket sellers, who were supposed to be making $8 a day, would take their salary perhaps out of the rented roll. They were charges that Fink was friendly with Tropical Park.

Gulfstream didn't open that following Monday, and since then it has lain unused and baking beneath the sun. An effort is being made to interest the rich men of trotting, for they could afford to run it in opposition to Hialeah, they being less interested in and less dependent on big daily handles than are the standard gallopers. So far, the old gaffers of harness racing have remained magnificently cool to the idea, but there is an outside chance that they will succumb. The word is out that it will be all right for the trotters to run at night—a flipflop of jurisprudence, which would arouse little discussion in this fabulous sandbar.

Ira Flagstead, Baseball Star, Dies

Olympia, Wash., March 13 (AP).—Ira Flagstead, 46, former major league baseball player, died at his home today. He had been ill since August.

Flagstead played with Detroit from 1919 to 1923 with the Boston Red Sox from 1923 to 1928 and with Washington in 1929. In 1925 he was a contender for the American League's most valuable player award. He was named Boston's outstanding player in that year.

Olympics in Finland Again Held Possible

Committee Meets in Helsinki to Discuss Possibilities; U. S. Experts Believe Games Will Be Staged

By International News Service

Berlin, March 13.—The Finnish Olympic committee convened in Helsinki to discuss whether Finland might still hold the Olympic Games in her capital, according to the German radio broadcast tonight.

The announcer said that if the games were held, they would aid in the reconstruction of Finland now that war with Russia has ended.

The games were originally scheduled for this summer.

New York, March 13 (INS).—A conviction prevailed tonight among track and field people that the Olympic Games will be staged in Helsinki July 20 to August 4 as originally intended.

Dan Ferris secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U. and an Olympic official, recalled the recent declaration by the Finnish Olympic committee that if the war with Russia ended by April 1 the games would be held. That is the deadline for a final announcement of intentions before the international committee can cancel the games.

Duquesne Gains Metro Cage Finals

By the Associated Press

New York, March 13.—Duquesne's rugged Dukes went into the finals of the Metropolitan Invitational basketball tournament tonight, victors in a fiercely-fought game with the Oklahoma Aggies by a 34-30 margin.

In a semifinal battle in which the lead changed hands 11 times, the Duquesne team clinched the victory in the last three minutes with a scoring outburst that gave them five precious points on a midcourt heave by Paul Widowitz, a lay-up shot by Eddie Milkovich and a free throw by Ruddy Debnar.

They froze the ball then in spite of all the frantic Aggies could do.

Duquesne plays Colorado for the championship Friday night, with Oklahoma and Depaul meeting for third place. Prior to the Duquesne victory, Colorado swamped Depaul, 52-37, as 10,711 watched.

For the winning Dukes, who have used but one substitute in two games, Widowitz was high scorer with 9 and the Aggies ace was Pete Renick with 10

Mrs. Vare Defeats Naomi Copic; Betty Jameson Wins

By International News Service

Belleair, Fla., March 13.—Without a real struggle in the four matches, National Champion Betty Jameson, Glenna Collett Vare, Jane Cothran and Dorothy Kirby won their way today into the semifinals of the Belleair Women's Golf Tournament.

Stocky Naomi Copic, the Toledo girl who scored an upset 2-and-1 victory yesterday over Medalist Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., proved no match for the veteran Mrs. Vare today and was put out of the running, 6 and 5.

Miss Kirby, the Atlanta star, had no difficulty in defeating Mrs. Tom Williams, of La Jolla, Calif., 6 and 4, and Miss Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., romped away with a 7-and-5 victory over Mrs. Philip Barney.

In the other contest, Miss Jameson, who hails from San Antonio, Tex., defeated Laddie Irwin, of Montclair, N. J., 4 and 3. Mrs. Vare and Miss Kirby will clash in the semifinals tomorrow, with Miss Jameson meeting Miss Cothran.

Carleton Is Mound Star for Brooklyn; Boston Sox, Reds And Tigers Also Win

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 13.—Led by Joe Gordon with a home run and two singles, the New York Yankees overpowered the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 2, in an exhibition game today.

Both the Dodgers runs came in the seventh after Rookie Charley Stanceau and Left Lee Grissom, making his first appearance for the world champions, had scattered five hits in the first six innings.

Tex Carleton did just as well for Brooklyn in his three-inning trick, fanning six and allowing only one hit, but then the Yanks went to work in the fourth and kept going.

N. Y. Giants Pounded

Winter Haven, Fla., March 13 (AP).—Manny Salvo, the New York Giants' big right-hander who was walloped all too frequently in the National League last season, got a going over by experts today as the Boston Red Sox captured their exhibition tussle, 7 to 3.

Salvo was battered for seven hits, including a tremendous home run by Jimmie Foxx, in the first three innings and even though the Sox subsequently were tamed down, the Giants never could catch up and were shut out until the last inning.

McCormick Paces Reds

Tampa, Fla., March 13 (AP).—Rookie Mike McCormick, with two triples and a double, led Cincinnati to a 7-to-1 triumph over St. Louis today, the Reds' second straight win from the Cardinals.

It was McCormick's day. He scored two runs and drove in one in five times at bat.

The game started as a hurling duel, Lloyd Dietz holding Ray Blades' crew hitless for three frames while the Reds failed to reach long Lon Warneke until the third.

Gene Thompson held the Cards to three hits in the last three innings while White and Barrett, in turn succeeding Warneke on the mound, yielded 10 safeties in the final five.

Red Guggino To Box at Arena Monday

Former Favorite Meets Gilmore in Eight-Round Bout

Carl (Red) Guggino, favorite of the Riding and Hunt Club fistic days, back in the District to regain his big following, yesterday was signed for an eight-rounder on next Monday night's all-star show at Turner's Arena.

Guggino, who has headlined shows in various clubs in New York and the East, and who boasts of an outstanding record as a lightweight, will meet Irish Frankie Gilmore, a newcomer from Brooklyn.

When he left this section a few years ago he had nine straight victories to his credit, with only a setback at the hands of Eddie Burl to mar his record. Otherwise, the red head's record is studded with wins over such boxers as Aldo Spoldi, Honey Mellody, Frankie Wallace, Paul Junior, Alex Blatch, Wesley Ramey, Charley Gomer, Lew Feldman and a couple of draws with Petey Sarron.

Gilmore is a youngster handled by Al Barnett, who always sends well-conditioned fighters to the post.

Another eight finds Myron Padlo, Philadelphian, who has won 34 out of 38 fights, and El Brookman, local scrapper, battling in one of the elimination bouts to find an opponent for Phil Furr. The other eight will bring back Wild Bill McDowell, the Texan, who went over with a bang last Monday by beating Vic Finazzo. Matchmaker Menendez is seeking either Paulie Griffith or Jackie Stewart as an opponent.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 13 (AP).—Heinz Vopel, Germany, and Charley Yates, Chicago, won the International six-day bicycle race by 179 points tonight after 2,025 miles of riding.

Mounting their cycles, they began a furious pace and edged out Torch and Doug Peden, brother team from Vancouver, B. C., for the victory.

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

—At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies seeking jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

JIM DEAN, PITCHER.

The Nats' bosses don't know yet whether they have in Mister J. H. Dean a mouthy counterpart of the famed J. H. (Dizzy) Dean or merely a brash young rookie with the same initials and very little pitching skill.

But as long as he is a member of the Nats, they will always be aware of his presence. Young Dean is the loudest, talking-est, grinning-est piece of rookie baseball flesh that has ever come down the pike to the Washington club.

JIM DEAN

Washington bought this 25-year-old Georgia pop-off from the Sanford club of the Florida State League in the same deal that fetched Sidney Hudson last fall, and on the strength of his pitching in that league Bucky Harris is bearing with him.

They've put the boy under a Charlotte contract, which may be significant, but he is within easy call if he shows any approach to his pitching in the Florida League where last season he won 21 games. There is evidence that he is no flash in the pan, at least in D league company, because the season before he put together a chain of 17 straight victories.

He's a big, 6-foot-5-inch country gawk with an overhand fast ball and strangely, no awfully exalted opinion of his own pitching ability. He admits cheerfully that his record in the Florida League was nothing to boast about, saying, "Shucks, I was pitching against a lotta bums."

He struck camp in burlap suit featuring bell-bottom trousers of the cake-eater fashion of 1916 and repaired to the town's poolroom to flaunt his skill with a cue, first thing.

He introduced himself to Manager Bucky Harris with an airy, "Hi, Skipper, I'm Jim Dean," and confessed frankly that he figured he might do the club some good.

He was hot stuff in the Florida League, the idol of the colored fans, particularly, because he'd interrupt his work on the mound to walk off the field and tell 'em to watch him whiff the next hitter. Inevitably, he was tagged with the name of "Dizzy" Dean.

Lou Plummer Meets 'Lighter' Golden Terror

Wrestle Tonight at Turner's Arena; O'Toole In Semifinal Match

The Golden Terror, according to wrestling headquarters, will be only a shadow of his former self tonight when he steps into the Turner's Arena ring to meet Lou Plummer, South Bend's gift to rassledom.

The feaful matman, it has been revealed, now weighs only 390 pounds—more than 20 pounds less than when he last appeared here against two men at the same time. The drop in weight is expected to make him a little meaner than ever before, as well as a little faster in action.

Though he'll be forced to take a second seat to the Terror in villainy tonight, Plummer has made quite a reputation for himself as a bad man. He has caused almost as many riots as the Terror.

In the semiwindup, Tommy O'Toole and Don Evans will tangle in a popularity contest. Ruddy Dusek takes on Ralph Garbibaldi, Jim Coffield meets Jack Lutz and Joe Maynard opposes Hymie Olson. The first bout is at 8:30.

Brewers Lose By 44-32 to Troy Celtics

Troy, N. Y., March 13.—Chick Reiser, sharpshooting Troy-Celtic guard, tonight paced his team to a decisive 44-to-32 victory over the Washington Heurich Brewers, of Washington, D. C., in an American Basketball League championship play-off series game here.

This victory avenged two defeats previously administered the Troy-Celtics by the Brewers on the local court and marked the first victory a Troy team has recorded over the Brewers on the home floor this season.

Reiser scored a grand total of 18 points to lead scores of both teams while Whitey Wilson and Moe Dubilier accounted for 12 and 10 points respectively for the invaders.

The Brewers tomorrow night are to open a barnstorming tour en route to Chicago, where they are to participate in the World's Professional Basketball tournament Sunday night.

Rickey Threatens Joe Medwick With Ineligibility

St. Louis, March 13.—Joe Medwick, baseball's No. 1 holdout, said he received a letter today from Vice President Branch Rickey of the St. Louis Cardinals, warning him of possible ineligibility if he failed to sign his contract.

"Nothing was mentioned in the letter about salary or a salary conference," Medwick asserted.

The slugging outfielder and former National League batting champion, who quit the Cardinal camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., a week ago, wants a $2,000 salary cut he took last year restored to the $20,000 he received in 1938.

Medwick said his reply to Rickey would put them no nearer a settlement in the controversy.

Rickey apparently was referring to the rule which says any player who fails to report to his club within ten days after the opening of its championship season shall not be eligible to play in any league games until authorized by the league president or baseball commissioner.

Turner Posts Forfeit for Mamakos Bout

$500 Offered Steve To Battle Furr for 15 Rounds Here

One of the most attractive all-local bouts in D. C. boxing history became a possibility yesterday when Joe Turner, promoter, posted a $500 check which would go to Steve Mamakos if he boxes Phil Furr for 15 rounds.

The affair would be billed as the District middleweight championship, and a tentative April 1 date was set.

"Without a doubt," Turner said, "the fight would draw a capacity house to the arena—accounting for a $2,400 gate. You can understand how I'm able to offer Mamakos these terms."

Furr, according to Promoter Turner, long has sought a bout with the Golden Greek, but each time his quarry has slipped through his fingers on the grounds that the Arena is to small for a respectable-sized gate.

Now Phil feels he is at his peak. In his last outing he turned in an impressive victory over Kenny LaSalle, who in turn was a victor over Mamakos last summer. The chances are Furr will be ranked over Steve in the next N. B. A. middleweight lis., a fact which should cause Mamakos to snap up the $500 guarantee.

Purple Glove Matches Set For Saturday

The second Purple Gloves colored boxing bouts, an elimination to determine District entries in the championships in St. Louis in August, will be staged Saturday night at Columbia Lodge, Rhode Island avenue and Third street northwest.

CCC Camp 160, winner of most of the honors in the first bouts on March 2, will again be in action and favored to take several decisions. Camp 333 also has a strong entry and might steal the laurels from No. 160.

Sponsored by the Order of the Elks, such outstanding stars as Jimmie Montgomery, Eugene Cole, Jimmie Long and George Farrall are expected to highlight the bouts. Herbert Harris is in charge.

Capital Golfer Gets Oddest Lie of Year

H. G. Gibson's Ball Stops on Pine Cone After Fancy Slice

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A golf freak that will take a lot of story telling to beat happened yesterday at Capital Club, where H. G. Gibson's ball landed atop a pine cone, 8 feet off the ground.

The setting was the seventeenth tee, where Gibson, W. J. Hollywood, John A. Allegreto and Tony Sylvester, club pro, were nearing the completion of their round. Gibson sliced one to the right of the green and it disappeared in the pines.

Gibson and his caddy looked around for the ball, and when they couldn't find it, called to the other members of the foursome to help. They kicked the needles around for a few minutes and were about to give up when Gibson happened to look up in the tree.

There, about 8 feet off the ground, was a pine cone growing on a small limb, and teed on the peak of the cone was the golf ball—believe it or not.

Gibson, who got much more kick out of it than he would have from a hole-in-one, knocked the ball off the cone with his putter, chipped on the green and dropped the putt for a 4, halving Tony, who played the hole in orthodox fashion from the tee, but 3-putted.

Spencer Named Pro At East Potomac

The last of the District's vacant pro golf posts was filled yesterday when Cliff Spencer moved in at noon as successor to Mel Shorey at East Potomac.

Spencer was in conference with S. G. Leoffler, boss of the public links, at 11 a. m. and an hour later was working on a few club repairs and learning the ropes from Manager Tommy Doerer, jr., of East Potomac.

Shorey resigned just a week ago to take the Indian Spring post while Spencer was professional at Beaver Dam until several weeks ago.

The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion will confine his tournament play to local events and the two major tourneys this summer.

KENWOOD

A. S. Bain was named new chairman for the greens, tournament and handicap committees in a meeting last night at Kenwood Country Club. Bain, who will again serve as chairman of the golf committee, will be assisted by W. O. Wooley, vice chairman, and S. Marlow, secretary.

Club champion John O. Bergelin will head the greens body, assisted by W. O. Wooley, Dr. L. B. Gaffney, Carl Gnam, F. H. McCrary and C. D. Wright. L. N. Shade is the new tournament chairman, and will be aided by Tom Davis, F. V. Haines, J. E. Hutchison, jr., J. F Wallace and R. H. Fuchs.

Jack Hooker will take over as handicap committee chairman, and E. M. Warner, F. J. Schrider, F. J. Hopkins and E. A. Tupper were also named to the group.

COLUMBIA

E. A. Merkle, Columbia's club champion, came within inches of two deuces on par-4 holes in a single round while playing with Pro Fred McLeod and George M Ferris.

On the 345-yard par-4 second Merkle's second shot rolled against the cup but failed to drop. Then on the 340-yard par-4 seventh his approach shot trickled into the cup for an eagle deuce.

Larry MacPhail Fines Camilli $100 a Day

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 13 (U.P.). Larry MacPhail, general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, today levied a $100-a-day fine against Holdout Dolph Camilli until he comes to terms.

Camilli already has agreed to accept $15,000 for 1940, but he insists that the club pay for the transportation of Mrs. Camilli and their four children to New York.

Postscripts . . .

Orlando, Fla., March 12.—Three rookie pitchers will make their debut on the firing line for the Nats tomorrow when Washington meets the Cleveland Indians at Fort Myers . . . They are Bucky Jacobs and the Cubans, Gilberto Torres and Rene Monteagudo . . . The 1940 Washington uniform will be minus the baseball centennial emblem on the left sleeve . . . It will be replaced with a plain black "W" . . . Rookie Pitcher Joe Quinn, who fractured his collar bone on Sunday while chasing a fly ball, underwent an operation today . . . The bone was reset and Quinn will be shipped to his Brooklyn home to await full recovery . . . Arch McDonald is making recordings of his interviews with new members of the Nats for transcription on Station WJSV . . . A Washington-Detroit deal is still brewing, no kidding . . . First Baseman Jimmy Wasdell spent his high school days in Cleveland running second to Jess Owens in track meets . . . To his great dismay, Buddy Myer inveigled Arch McDonald into a billiard game today by offering 2-to-1 odds . . . McDonald's misspent youth began to reveal itself once the game started and it was no contest, with Myer a poor second . . . Bucky Harris turned down a request by the Finnish Relief Fund All-Star Game Commission, to permit Ken Chase to pitch against the National League All-Stars at Tampa on Sunday . . . Pointing out that Chase was not yet in pitching condition . . . There is a deep-seated belief among the Nats' bosses that Joe Krakauskas is due to blossom out this season as a swell pitcher . . . Washington, Detroit and New York are now the last frontiers of strictly daytime baseball in the American League . . . Sammy West, who has taken unto himself the job of teaching Buddy Lewis how to play rightfield, now qualifies as the only rightfield coach in history.—POVICH.

Delhuds and Y.M.C.A. Clash in Post Tournament Tonight

First Girls Game Carded At Heurich's

Treasury Vs. Veterans Administration; Ida's Meet Mullen Cafe In Second Game.

The first girls' game and an unlimited battle that should be up to the standard of the point-for-point struggle already on the record books, are scheduled for tonight in the District A. A. U. championship tournament, being sponsored by The Washington Post. At 8:30 o'clock, the Treasury Department and Veterans Administration teams will clash in the initial game for the title left vacant when the Rockville club failed to organize this year.

However, Rockville will be represented by four players now flying the Treasury colors. They are Margaret Lanier, Edith Koiner and Josephine and Imogene Smith. Others on the Treasury squad are Margarite Goetz, Edna Hall, Dale Aylesworth and Cecelia Orlow. Veterans Administration has a well-balanced club.

The unlimited class game, scheduled for 9:30, should prove a thriller. Delaware and Hudson, runner-up in the Heurich League, is anxious to reach the finals where it hopes to get another crack at the United Typewriters, 1940 Heurich champions and winner of the 1939 A. A. U. title. D. and H. drew a bye in the first round. The Delhuds meet the Y. M. C. A. which presents its strongest club in years.

"Y" Five Impressed

The "Y" came through with a victory over the Hyattsville Businessmen in the first round. With that victory under their belts, the G streeters will take the floor with plenty of confidence. Madden, O'Connell and Harrison are the point-hungry boys who will have to be stopped.

D. and H. can offer some scoring threats of its own. Burns, playing the best ball of his career, is primed for the action. Folliard, Lucas and others of the seasoned players will be in harness. The winner of this game will move into the quarter-final bracket, already populated by Interior, United Typewriters and Bolling Field.

Tonight's program opens with a 145-pound contest at 7:30. Mullen Cafe and Ida's Department Store will do the battling with Ida's, from up Georgia avenue way, a slight favorite.

Sherwood to Play

Tomorrow night, another girls' game will be on the card. Sherwood and Mount Rainier due battle, starting at 7:30 o'clock. Two unlimited games are scheduled. Washington Boys Club, Central Branch, winner over the Census Bureau Nationals, will tackle CCC Camp 2349, from Quantico, Va., at 8:30, while Federal Bureau of Investigation makes its tourney debut against the Greenbelt A. C. FBI drew a bye in the first round while Greenbelt, led by Mickey McDonald, fought its way to a thrillining victory over Treasury.

Orioles Increase Hockey Lead; Beat N. Y. Rovers, 5-4

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 13.—With Freddy Hunt showing the way, the Baltimore Orioles jumped their Eastern Amateur Hockey League lead to five points tonight with a 5 to 4 victory over the New York Rovers.

Wingman Hunt scored three goals and had an assist in the fourth, and punched through the winning counter in the third period.

The game started smoothly, coasted through a scoreless first period, then turned into a slam-bang battle the rest of the way.

Baltimore held a 3-1 lead at the start of the final period, but the Rovers jammed through three goals after 7:20 of play to tie the count. Hunt's winning marker came at 10:56.

The Orioles need two more victories in the six remaining games to clinch the flag. New York and Washington, each with five games to play, are tied for second place.

On Fishing

Bonefish are just about the oddest fish we know of. Not because of their physical make-up, or actions on the end of a line, but for what they do to anglers.

ACKERMAN

Let any angler hang on to one of these "wraiths of the flats" and he is a confirmed addict of their pursuit for the rest of his natural life. We have known the mania to strike so hard that business, instead of being pursued that fishing might be possible, has been relegated to those days when bonefishing was impossible. We even know one local medico who, during the past year, moved his practice to West Palm Beach in order to be closer to the southern Florida banks, that are their feeding grounds.

And the stories you hear of bonefish . . . by those infected, of course . . . would fill two books. Most of the time we are gullible enough ot believe every word; drink it all down with open-mouthed wonder. The one thing we can't understand is who catches the many fish that top the 10-pound mark. They are common, according to the bonefishermen, yet during the five years of the Miami Tournament only five have been entered, and the record is 10½ pounds. For the Bahama division it is 11 pounds 11 ounces.

Does bonefishing take all the truth out of anglers?

Bill Tyner, of Fort Meyers, who moves to Tavernier each winter just to bonefish, sent in an entry to tournament headquarters this week that had Director Tommy Aitkin calling for help, to make sure he was right in believing it the largest bonefish caught in Florida waters in more than 20 years, and not some hallucination from an overly heavy lunch.

It took two days, two full committees of five each of Miami's leading citizens with a 70-mile trip down to Tavernier for one of them, and a page full of Al Pflueger's figures, before the fish was accepted as an entry.

So we have Tyner's 12¼-pound bonefish now, as tops of the species in this year's competition for the tournament all time record. He has more than a little chance to draw down an outstanding achievement plaque.

Yet for two days he was a suspicious character—at best a prodigious liar, and then because he had had the good sense to put it on ice, a national hero. He is firmly convinced his days of happy-go-lucky angling are over—that life now could never be the same, for even though he is secure on his throne as king of all bonefishermen, he will go through life striving to boat a 14-pounder, as thousands of other anglers have been fishing unsuccessfully for 12-pounders.

Is it because he realizes the importance of his catch and his exalted position in the realm of angling that he is having the fish mounted by Al Pflueger, or so he can just point to it in later years and say: "You tell 'em, Little Fox."

Trout Fishing Rules Set in Maryland

Frederick, Md., March 13.—The same trout fishing regulations that prevailed on Big Hunting Creek in the Federal Catoctin recreational area under the National Parks Service last spring, will be enforced by the State game and inland fish commission when the 1940 season opens throughout Maryland on April 1, State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte said today.

The warden announced Clarence C. Carty, chairman of the Frederick County advisory council, that fishing in the stream will be limited to the use of dry and wet flies and the daily creel limit reduced to five trout 7 or more inches in length. On other State streams the creel limit is ten and any type bait may be employed. The National Parks Service turned over control of the stream to the State last week-end.

Finn Relief Game To Go On Despite Settlement of War

By the Associated Press

Belleair, Fla., March 13.—Commissioner K. M. Landis said today the all-star baseball game scheduled for Tampa Sunday for the Finnish relief fund will be played despite the truce between Russia and Finland.

"There must be some relief fund remaining from Herbert Hoover's efforts on behalf of the Finns and we'll let the proceeds of the game go to that fund," Landis said. "It was never for soldiers or arms, anyway, but for the relief of noncombatants and they are still in need.

"So we'll play the game as planned with the same stars, same managers and everything else the same."

Betty's Bobby Captures Florida City Purse by 3 Lengths

Favorites Take Beating At Tropical

Apprentice Durando Scores With a Triple; Betty's Bobby Brings Backers $8.20 Ticket

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 13.—In marked contrast to the previous afternoon, favorites traveled a rough road here today. When Joseph E. Widener's entry of Plowshare and Town Boy failed to get close in the featured Florida City Purse, mile and 70 yards' test for 3-year-olds, it marked the fifth setback in as many races for form players.

The purse in the headliner went to Betty's Bobby, the second choice, which carried the H. & H. Stock Farm's silks first home by three lengths. Mrs. M. C. Breen's Sundodger was second, with Wheatley Stable's Ship Biscuit two lengths behind. Plowshare was fifth and Town Boy eighth in the field of nine.

Winner Pays $8.20

Betty's Bobby paid $8.20 and finished in 1:43 flat to give Apprentice Merrill Packer a double. The winner had been close up several times this winter, but this was his initial score in eight 1940 efforts.

Eddie Arcaro, who rode Day Dodger, was to take a well-earned rest after today's program. His agent, Nick Huff, said this morning that the leading veteran jockey of the Florida season—he had 53 winners compared to Apprentice Jack Flinchum's 67 for the winter racing here up to this afternoon—was going to do some fishing for a while before departing for New York. Arcaro is slated to don silks again in the Paumonok Handicap at Jamaica next month.

Sundodgers could not hold a four-length lead and allowed Betty's Bobby to spurt into command after 5 furlongs. The Haste gelding drew away with ease. Sundodger had little trouble saving the place from the forward-running Ship Biscuit.

Charlie Durando, Brooklyn apprentice, rounded out a triple and the W. J. Susini barn earned a double when The Thrush, paying $14.80, breezed to the wire a three-length victor in the mile and a furlong sixth race. The $3,000 plater equaled Easiest Way's track record of 1.50 2-5, further proof that the local strip is faster than ever.

Cuckoo earned the place, a length before Redbreast, which came from many lengths out of contention. The Thrush wore down Cuckoo at the top of the stretch and pulled away without being fully extended.

Andy K May Surprise in Ky. Derby

Millsdale Colt Given Chance to Beat Col. Bradley's Great Runner

By the Associated Press

New York, March 13.—You may not believe it, from the way Bimelech is being touted from the housetops all the way between here and Louisville, but there really are a few other hosses expecting to show up against Big Bimmie when he goes after the "triple crown" this spring.

They've made Col. E. R. Bradley's classy colt the shortest-priced future book favorite in history, not only for the Kentucky Derby, but for the three-crown stunt as well. Trainers of other gallopers in one or the other of the races even overlook their own hopefuls to point the finger at Black Toney's Boy.

Yet, a comparison of the lists of nominations for the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont shows 16 owners have overcome their fears sufficiently to name a total of 19 other horses to run after the three-way 3-year-old championship which has been won by only four other thoroughbreds in history. A dozen others, already among the eligibles for the Derby and Belmont, are expected to be entered as supplementary nominees for the Preakness at $1,500 per supplementary crack, incidentally.

Bashful Duck Candidate

Even Col. Bradley, who is luckier than most with a fellow like Bimmie going for him, has another candidate, Bashful Duck, listed among the 20 already named for all three starts. While Bimelech is definitely the one to beat, there are several more among the 20 "crowndidates"—as it has been aptly put by Dave (The Whizzer) Woods, Alf Vanderbilt's right-hand man at Pimlico and Belmont—who might make Bimmie step for it.

Tops among these is Andy K, from the Millsdale stable of M. L. Emerich and Tony Pelleteri. This little fellow had all the speed in the world as a two-year-old last year, but just couldn't run straight. He's been learning over the winter and the word is he has finally found out where he's going.

Flight Command Contender

Among those nominated for all three are the stakes winners, C. V. Whitney's Flight Command and Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Merry Knight. Whitney also is expected to file the name of his unbeaten "mystery colt," Carrier Pigeon, for the Preakness, to complete an entry.

Trusts Rank Kennecott 1st As Investment

New York, March 13.—Rapid rise in business activity to new record levels, accompanied by the outbreak of war abroad, brought significant changes in the popularity of stocks held by leading investment trusts in 1939. For the first time in the history of the survey made for the past 11 years by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, Kennecott was the most favored issue, moving up from fifth place in the ranking of the 15 most popular issues

North American advanced from ninth to second place, and General Motors, which held the leadership from 1933-1936, inclusive, rose from sixth to third position. International Nickel and Standard Oil of New Jersey, which were tied for top honors in 1938, dropped to eighth and ninth posts, respectively, and Sears Roebuck from third to fifth place. American Gas & Electric was the only issue to appear among the 15 most favored stocks in each of the past eight years.

Examination of the 1939 year-end reports of 78 management investment trusts reveals that Kennecott was held in 56 portfolios, as compared with 47 a year earlier; North American had representation in 55 companies against 46 the year previous, and General Motors 53 compared with 47.

Montgomery Ward

Montgomery Ward, which rose from eighth to fourth place, was held by 52 concerns against 46 in the previous year, while Sears Roebuck and General Electric appeared in 50 portfolios, Union Carbide and International Nickel in 49 each, Standard Oil of New Jersey in 48, Chrysler in 44, Texas Corporation and Westinghouse Electric each in 43, and American Gas & Electric in 41 reports. International Harvester and du Pont were represented in 37 and 36 investment trusts, respectively. With the exception of Loew's, all of the 15 most popular stocks of 1938 appeared in the latest select group. Du Pont, which was added, returned to the fold of the investment favorites for the first time since 1936.

Apparently in anticipation of a favorable level of business activity in 1940, institutional investors were small buyers on balance in 1939, despite some lightening of investments following the outbreak of hostilities abroad early in September; and closed the year still in rather heavily invested position The 78 trusts had aggregate cash holdings of $71,377,000, or 5.1 per cent of total assets at the past year end. This compared with $83,258,000 (revised), or 5.9 per cent of total assets at the close of 1938.

The 15 stocks most favored by investing companies in the past two years are:

Kennecott	Intl. Nickel
North American	Stand. Oil of N. J.
General Motors	Sears Roebuck
Montgomery Ward	General Elec.

Surrender of Finland Regarded, While Called Against Allies; Has No Apparent Market Effect

New York, March 13.—Wide fluctuations in Scandinavian bonds, sterling and wheat featured the market's response to the dramatic surrender of the gallant Finnish army, after its three and a half months' struggle against overwhelming odds. The peace with Russia, after the Finns had tired of waiting for Allied aid, as did the Czechs and Poles, was regarded in the financial district as bearish on our own business and market position, fo rthe continued outmaneuvering of the Allies by Germany and Russia may eventually raise doubts as to the ultimate success of France and Great Britain, our customers.

Market Loss Negligible

Such deductions had no apparent effect upon the stock market, however, which closed with a negligible loss of 0.11 point in moderate trading of 625,790 shares. There was an effort at one time to depress the aviation shares, but a later recovery virtually eliminated early losses, it being realized that the American firms have as much business as they can comfortably handle, irrespecuve of what may happen to orders from Finland. The aviation group was virtually unchanged for the day.

Finland 6s featured the runup in bonds, closing up 12 points at a new high for the year. Norwegian and Danish issues also were sharply higher. The United States Government list was firm to higher. In the foreign exchanges sterling continued its plunge, breaking to the lowest since April 19, 1933, in the midst of the devaluation muddle. Local banks explained that the market for sterling was thin and that the decline should not be regarded as a measure of the amount of business.

Major commodity markets were put under pressure by the peace treaty, particularly wheat, which dropped more than 2 cents a bushel, to the lowest in more than a week. Snows over a major portion of the wheat belt added to the bearish pressure, the close being off 1⅜ to 1¾ cents. Heavy liquidation hit the cotton market, carrying futures down to 21 points. Foreign selling was added to the downward trend.

The early attack on the aviations and their later recovery made them the features of the day's trading. Curtiss-Wright, the most active stock of the day, was off a small fraction. United Air Lines and Pan-American were the next in the active list, each closing higher, with United up 1⅛ to a new high for the year. Utilities did better than the balance of the market, coming back slightly after the recent weakness which accompanied the SEC's action in carrying out the integration portions of the Public Utility Act. Steels were soft, investors seeing little encouragement in the weekly survey of Iron Age, which noted that a considerable increase in demand is necessary to prevent the production rate from slipping back to the 59 per cent rate which prevailed in early September at the outbreak of the European war.

Scandinavian Bonds Strong

Fresh advances developed today in Finnish and Scandinavian bonds, owing to Parliamentary ratification of the war settlement, but other departments of the listed bond market were dull. Turnover dropped to $5,980,000. Treasury issues moved fractionally higher, while the long list of speculative corporation obligations showed small gains and losses in about equal numbers.

Finland 6s soared 12 points on the conclusion of the unequal struggle with Russia. Norwegian and Danish bonds advanced 1 to 5 points. German issues firmed, while Australian and Canadian bonds drifted lower. Italian, Belgian and other neutral European issues were dull. Latin-American default bonds moved irregularly, as dealers still were trying to evaluate the significance of the Brazilian arrangement.

Speculative railroad bonds showed small movements, with occasional variations of a point or more in evidence, and the tone uncertain throughout. Local traction bonds were inclined to settle, although changes were small. Some of the holding company issues were in fair demand, but share privilege bonds remained quiet.

United States Treasury obligations moved higher by small fractions, with business again in a humdrum routine, now that the June note refunding has been accomplished. Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were unchanged.

Foreign Exchange

New York, March 13 (AP).—The swift decline in the British pound in the "free" foreign exchange market was checked today but not before the currency had dropped below the bottom prices hit in last autumn's war market and sold at the lowest in nearly a decade. Sterling canceled early losses of 6 cents in terms of the dolar to close unchanged at $3.77. The Canadian dollar also wiped out morning declines and ended ¼ cent higher. At the close $2.12½ U. S. cents could buy one Canadian dollar. While currencies of the Allied nations regained their balance, neutral monies showed weakening tendencies. The belga and guilder each dropped .02 of a cent and the Swiss franc .01 of a cent.

Closing rates follow, Great Britain in dollars, others in cents:

Bank of Commerce Also Makes Helen Sharpe H St. Executive

Directors of the Bank of Commerce & Savings at their meeting yesterday afternoon elected Helen R. Sharpe assistant secretary and George L. C. Schairer assistant manager of the H street branch. This branch is located opposite the United States Government Printing Office at North Capitol and H streets. Both Mrs. Sharpe and Mr. Scheirer have been with the bank for a number of years.

Mrs. Sharpe is a native of Washington and joined the staff of the bank in 1930. She was formerly chairman of the safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and was the first woman to hold this office.

Mr. Scheirer is a native of New York City. He has attended Temple and Northwestern Universities and is a graduate of Strayer College from which he received his degree in Bachelor of Science in commerce. He was formerly associated with banks in New York and Chicago and has been with the Bank of Commerce and Savings for the past five and one half years.

Directors of the bank also declared the usual quarterly dividend of $2.50 per share payable March 30 to stockholders of record March 20. For several years the bank has been paying an annual dividend of $15 a share, paying $2.50 each quarter and an extra dividend of $2.50 on June 30 and December 31.

Auditors' Meeting

Arrangements have been completed for the annual joint meeting of the fiduciaries and auditors sections of the District of Columbia Bankers Association tonight, at the Lee House. Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the Board of Tax Appeals of the District of Columbia, will speak on the District of Columbia income and inheritance tax statutes. Considerable interest has been aroused on these matters and a large attendance of local bankers is expected.

Carpel Dividend

Wheat Prices Decline With Peace Pact

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 13.—Wheat values dropped about 2 cents a bushel today to the lowest level since March 5, due largely to selling based on receipt of grain belt moisture and European peace talk.

Russo-Finnish peace developments, arousing conjecture as to its effect on the big power war, and reports of negotiations involving the Pope as well as others, created a bearish background into which fitted the snowfall that spread over much of the crop-producing area of the United States.

Wheat rallied slightly from the day's lows, which were as much as 2⅝ cents below yesterday's close, but finished with net losses of 1⅜ to 1¾, with May at $1.01⅝ to $1.01¾, and July, 99⅜ to 99½. Corn closed ⅜ to ⅝ lower; May, 55⅞ to 56; July, 56⅜; oats, ¼ to ½ down; rye, 1⅛ to 1½ off; soy beans, 1½ lower, and lard, 15 to 18 lower.

Export Gain Checks Decline In Steel Trade

By the Associated Press

New York, March 13.—Heavier export business and spotty improvement in domestic demand for steel were enough to check an eight-week decline in mill production, Iron Age said today in a weekly survey.

The review added, however, the current rate of 63½ per cent of capacity, unchanged from last week, faces further testing and needs a considerable increase in demand to prevent another slide.

"While steel bookings the past week," the survey added, "continued the leveling-off process which began in late February, the steel sales picture is not without some bright spots.

"Merchant pipe for construction work and material for agricultural implements are in demand and the aircraft and machinery industries are taking considerably greater tonnages of alloy steels. Automobile parts plants are releasing in volume.

Cotton Prices Slump 40 Cents To $1.05 a Bale

New York, March 13 (AP).—Cotton futures dropped with a bang today in one of the fastest sessions in weeks. Climaxing the price swing was a last-minute rally of around 10 points in the old March delivery but at the finish the list was still down 8 to 21 points.

A severe slump in overseas markets—Liverpool broke the 25-point allowed limit—released a flood of foreign liquidation by operations taking advantage of price differences between here and abroad. Bombay alone was rumored to have sold around 15,000 bales.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"Sitting South, I had a terrific argument with my partner as to his bidding," writes Mrs. M. F., jr., of Charlottesville, presenting her question. "This is the situation, with East-West vulnerable and West dealer:

♠ K 8 5 3
♡ A K 10 3
♣ None

♠ Q 7 6 ♡ Q J 9 8 6 ◇ 8 4 3 ♣ 6 5 — ♠ A J 10 2 ♡ 5 2 ◇ A K Q 10 ♣ 9 7 4

♠ 9 4 ♡ 7 4 ◇ J ♣ A K Q J 10 8 3 2

"The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ◇	1 ♠	3 ♣
Pass	3 ♡	Pass	5 ♣
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	Redbl.
Pass	5 ♡	Pass	6 ♣
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ♠

"What should the bidding have been?" asks Mrs. M. F., jr. "I went down two, which is obvious."

It is bad luck to be defeated at five clubs on this hand. Certainly the minor game is worth a gamble. It can be made, provided West does not open a spade, for declarer can double-finesse the hearts and obtain the necessary discard. He will lose only one spade and one diamond, instead of two spades and a diamond.

Conservative players might stop below game and be grateful for the part-score.

When the hand was played, North and South got too high. North's bidding, leaves much to be criticized, most particularly his "rescue" bid of five hearts on a four-card suit which his partner had never supported. Moreover, he acted directly against his partner's orders in bidding over the redouble.

It would have been wiser for North to open with a heart bid originally; he could show the diamonds later if it seemed feasible. We must agree with South, and mark North for a poor performance on this hand.

With every album consisting of four records—eight sides of pulsating Conga tunes—goes a booklet containing simple directions for the dance. Arthur Murray, prominent American dance teacher, cooperated with Columbia in presenting two top-notch artists illustrating each step, with captions and reading text taken from Murray's book "How to Become a Good Dancer."

Although it started in Cuba some hundred years ago, Conga captured the fancy of dancing America this year with its tempo and jungle undertones. Desi Arnaz, bandleader, singer, dancer and instrumentalist, is King of the Conga to its numerous devotees. Heading a native band of accomplished musicians steeped for years in authentic Conga traditions, Arnaz is perhaps the best known exponent of his native dance.

Born in Cuba, Arnaz moved to Miami after his father, after serving a prison term for political reasons, decided to make his home in the United States. Desi, 22 at the time, played New York clubs for a while until the country went Conga-mad.

Today, the Conga line is a familiar sight on the dance floor. Arnaz, as its chief prophet, is enjoying phenomenal success in "Too Many Girls" and La Conga, night club.

Twenty-five songs have monopolized the 100 hit tunes to reach Columbia's Saturday night "Your Hit Parade" in the first 10 weeks of 1940 but only four—"Scatterbrain," "All the Things You Are," "Careless" and "Indian Summer"—have achieved first place.

In No 1 spot four times, "Careless" is the 1940 first place leader thus far, followed by "Scatterbrain" three times; "All the Things You Are," twice and "Indian Summer," once. "Scatterbrain" however, was first several times in December.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

Matters were complicated enough for Archie Goodwin, confidential secretary to Nero Wolfe, when there were just a diamond theft and a mysterious paper to investigate. Carla Lovchen had hidden the paper in one of Wolfe's books when she came to ask his help for her friend, Neya Tormie. Nat Driscoll, a pupil in Miltan's fencing studio where Carla and Neya taught, had ccused Neya of stealing his diamonds. Wolfe sent Archie to the studio with Carla and Driscoll apologized for accusing Neya, for his secretary had taken the jewels to a jeweler. Everyone was surprised by a scream upstairs, and more shocked to find the body of Percy Ludlow, another fencing pupil. He ha- been killed with an epee tipped with a deadly col de mort. Th police were called in and Archie, who wanted to report to Wolfe, made a wild escape through the cellar and a restaurant next door to his car parked nearby. For Archie had noticed that something had been placed in his overcoat pocket and he was mighty suspicious.

I WAS, of course, on Forty-ninth street. My impulse was to hoof it around a couple of corners to Forty-eighth street and get the roadster, but it was parked only a few yards from the entrance to Miltan's, so I voted unanimously for discretion and hopped into a taxi. On its cushion, bumping along downtown on Park avenue, I maintained the discretion by not attempting to explore my overcoat pocket, considering that if things got complicated and aggravating enough the taxi driver might be asked questions about what he had seen in his mirror. So I just sat and let him bump me down to Thirty-fifth street and cross-town to the number of Wolfe's house.

As I passed through the front hall I tossed my hat on a hook but kept my overcoat on. In the office, Wolfe sat at his desk, and in front of him was the metal box that was kept on a shelf in the safe, to which he alone had a key, and which he had never opened in my presence. I had always supposed that it contained papers too private even for me, but for all I knew it might have been stuffed with locks of hair or the secret codes of the Japanese army. He put something into it and shut the lid and frowned at me.

I shook my head. "No soap. I might have been able to bring her if I had had a chance to exert my charm; but on account of circumstances beyond my control——"

"Circumstances forcing you to return here alone?"

"Not exactly forcing, no, sir. You may remember that on the phone I mentioned a bird named Percy Ludlow, who said that your daughter was getting his cigarettes out of his coat at his request. Well, somebody murdered him."

"Neither am I. I ruined my coat falling off of a fence on purpose. At 2 minutes after 6, Miss Lovchen and Miss Tormie were upstairs giving fencing lessons and various other people were doing other things. Miss Tormie was supposed to be giving a lesson to Percy Ludlow. I was downstairs in the office with Mr. and Mrs. Miltan. We heard yells and ran up two flights into a commotion of assorted people. In the fencing room at the end we found Percy Ludlow on the floor with an epee running through him from front to back and 8 inches beyond. Miltan stayed there on guard and his wife went to the office to phone for the police and I took charge of the front door. The first two cops on the scene were radio patrol, the next three were precinct bums, and the homicide squad arrived around 6:24."

"Well?"

"That's all."

"All?" Wolfe was as nearly speechless as I had ever seen him. "You——" He sputtered. "You were right there, inside there, and you deliberately ran away——"

"WAIT a minute. Not deliberately. A cop relieved me at the door and another one took me with him to the office, where the inmates had gathered. I happened to be standing near the rack where I had hung my coat and I noticed that the pocket was bulging open on account of something in it. When I had hung the coat up the pocket had been empty. Maybe someone had merely mistaken it for the wastebasket. On the other hand, there was a murderer in the room, and Miss Tormie had presumably been fencing with the victim, and I was there as the representative of Miss Tormie. The attitude that might be adopted by the homicide squad in face of those facts would certainly be distasteful, in case there was a general search and the object in my pocket wasn't waste-paper. So I descended to the basement and left by the back door and fell over a fence and took a taxi."

"And what was the object?"

"I don't know." I removed my coat and spread it on his desk. "I thought it would be more fun to look at it with you. To the tip of my fingers it felt like a piece of canvas." I was widening the mouth of the pocket and peeping in. "Yep, it's canvas." I inserted fingers and thumb and eased it out. It was rolled tight. As I unrolled it, it became a heavy canvas gauntlet, with reinforced palm, and a little metal dingus slid off onto the desk.

"Let's don't touch that," I suggested, and bent over to inspect it. At one end it had three claws, or fingers, and at the other it tapered to a single point, sharp as an ice pick. I straightened up with a nod.

"Uh-huh, I thought so."

"What the devil is it?"

"My God, look at it! It's the col de mort!"

"Confound you, Archie——"

"Okay, but let it alone." I told him about the disappearance of the curio from Miltan's cabinet and the history of it. He listened with his lips compressed.

When I was through he demanded, "And you think this was used——"

"I know damn well it was. The end of the epee that killed Ludlow was blunt, and Miltan said it could not possibly have been thrust through him that way. So this thing was removed afterward. It looks as if it would slide right off. I doubt if I need to point out those stains on the glove where this was wrapped up in it."

"Thank you, I can see."

"And you can also see that it is a woman's glove. It looks big on account of the way it's made, but it's not big enough——"

"I can see that too."

"And can you see that if I had stayed there and that contraption had been found in my pocket, or if I had tried to hide it——"

I STOPPED because his lips were working and he had shut his eyes. It didn't take long, maybe 30 seconds, then he reached for the button and pushed it. When Fritz appeared he was in a cap and apron similar to those worn by the man in the court who hadn't seen my wife's cat.

"Turn out the light in the hall and do not answer the door," Wolfe told him.

"Yes, sir."

"If the phone rings, answer it in the kitchen. Archie is not here and you don't know where he is or when he will return. I am engaged and cannot be disturbed. Draw the heavy curtains in the front and the dining room, but first—is there a full loaf of the Italian round?"

"Yes, sir."

"Bring it, please, with a small knife and a roll of waxed paper."

When Fritz left I followed him, to hang my coat in the hall and shoot the bolt on the front door. As I returned I flipped the light switch, and in a moment Fritz returned with the required articles on a tray. Wolfe told him to stand by, and then attacked the loaf of bread with the knife, which of course was like a razor, as Fritz's knives always were. He described a circle four inches in diameter in the center of the loaf, and then dug in, excavating a neat round hole clear to the bottom crust but leaving the crust intact. Next he picked up the col de mort with the tips of his fingers, placed it on the palm of the glove, rolled the glove up tight, wrapped it in some waxed paper, and stuffed it into the hole in the loaf. He filled the extra space with wads of paper, and spread a sheet of paper smoothly over the top. With his swift and dexterous fingers, the entire operation consumed not over 3 minutes.

He told Fritz, "make a chocolate icing, at once, and cover this well. Put it in the refrigerator. Dispose of the bread scraps."

"Yes, sir." Fritz picked up the tray and departed.

I said sarcastically, "Bravo. It's wonderful how your mind works. If that had been me I would just have gone up and chucked it in my bureau drawer. Of course it's more picturesque to disguise it as a cake, but it's an awful waste of chocolate, and who do you think is going to come looking for it? Do you think I'd have brought it here if anyone had any suspicion that I had it?"

"I don't know. But someone knows that you had it and that you brought it away—the person who put it there. Who had an opportunity to do that?"

"Everybody. They were all there in the office. While I was on guard at the street door."

"When you removed the coat from the rack and started off with it, were you looking at people's faces?"

"No, I was being nonchalant. There were two cops there and I had to get out of the room with it."

"You say Miss Tormie was supposed to be fencing with Mr. Ludlow. Why supposed? Isn't it known whether she was or not?"

"It may be known, but not by me. I was down in the office with Mr. and Mrs. Miltan when the porter found the body and started a squawk. After that I had no chance to talk with Miss Tormie or anybody else."

The telephone rang. I plugged in the kitchen extension and we heard, faintly, Fritz's voice taking the call.

I did so.

AT A QUARTER to ten we finally left the dining table, returned to the office, switched on the lights, and sat down to wait. Various developments had occurred. The doorbell had rung three times, unheeded, and the phone somewhat oftener. At the finish of the salad I had left Wolfe alone with the green tomato pie and gone to the darkened front room for a peek around the window curtain. Two men in plain clothes were on the sidewalk, standing there with their hands in their pockets looking chilly and frustrated. I gave them a Bronx cheer and went to the kitchen and used the phone. Johnny Keems and Orrie Cather were out, and I left a message for them to call the office. I got Fred Durkin and Saul Panzer and told them I was just making contact and they were to await possible orders, and informed Saul about the envelope he would receive in the morning mail. I took it for granted that the number which had been jotted on his memo pad by Fritz, who had been answering the phone as instructed, was the number of the Miltan studio, but I verified it anyway by looking in the book, and told Fritz to call it and convey the message that Mr. Wolfe and Mr. Goodwin were now both at home and at leisure. Then I went back to the dining room and joined Wolfe at the coffee.

Our wait, after we returned to the office, was a short one. We hadn't been there more than five minutes when the doorbell called me to the front. As I opened the door I was expecting a brace of sergeants at the most, and was really surprised when I saw a single familiar figure confronting me, with a felt hat cocked over one of the half-buried irate eyes and an unlit cigar tilted up from a corner of the wide determined mouth.

"Honored," I declared, standing aside to give him passage. "Deeply honored."

"Go to hell," Inspector Cramer growled, entering. I shut the door and took his hat and coat and disposed of them, and followed him into the office.

Wolfe offered a hand, greeted him nicely, and said this was a pleasure he hadn't had for some months.

"Yeah. Quite a pleasure." Cramer sat down, took the cigar from his mouth, scowled at me, replaced the cigar at a better angle, and spoke.

"Where you been, Goodwin?" He was practically snarling. Before I could reply he went on, "Forget it. If I already knew you'd tell me and if I didn't you wouldn't." He removed the cigar again and leaned at me. "You're the most damn contrary pest within my knowledge. Twenty times I've had you under my feet when I was busy and had no use for you. Now I go to look at a murder and I am told that an important witness has calmly took his hat and coat and departed, and by God, it turns out to be you! The one time you're supposed to be there you're not! I've told you before that I'd throw you in the jug for a nickel. This time I'd do it for nothing!"

I inquired, "Did you find Arthur?"

"We found—none of your damn business what we found. What did you run away for?"

"Because I wanted to." I requisitioned a friendly grin for him. "Look, Inspector, you know perfectly well you're just being rhetorical. I ran away to keep from losing my job. Mr. Wolfe had sent me there on an errand with instructions to report back when the errand was finished. It was finished, and as you know, Mr. Wolfe doesn't take an excuse. By the way, I left my car there, parked on Forty-eighth——"

"Nuts. Why did you beat it?"

"I'm telling you. I would have been kept there till midnight, and for nobody's benefit, because there were a dozen people there who knew more than I did about the murder, and at least one of them a lot more." I let my voice rise a little in indignation. "I helped out all I could, didn't I? Didn't I guard the front door until the radio and precinct guys——"

I stopped short.

WHAT A HEARTLESS FIEND THAT RACKETEER, LOUIE BONETTI MUST BE, POLLUTING BABIES' MILK!
HE'S LIKE A BIG, UGLY OCTOPUS, WITH TENTACLES REACHING INTO EVERY PART OF THIS CITY'S LIFE!
I COULD KEEP STILL AS LONG AS HE CONFINED HIMSELF TO ROBBING NIGHT-CLUB OWNERS, OR EVEN DRY-CLEANING FIRMS .... BUT PUTTING CHILDREN'S LIVES IN DANGER, IS GOING TOO FAR!
WHAT CAN YOU DO ABOUT IT, LEONA?
I'LL SHOW YOU WHAT I CAN DO, AUNT MARY! ... I CAN GO FIND JOHN BLACKSTON AND TELL HIM ALL I KNOW ABOUT BONETTI'S CONNECTION WITH THE CLUB BUCCANEER MURDER!
GOOD GIRL! I KNEW YOU'D COME THROUGH!
